Tanks, Troops Leave Czechoslovak Capital

U.S. Promises Continued Support For South Korea

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The prospect of continued American troop support for South Korea and the promise of better weapons for its army have emerged from the first round of conferences between Presidents Nixon and Chung Hee Park.

Nixon and the South Korean leader met for two hours in private shortly before a state dinner for 250 guests at the St. Francis Hotel Thursday night.

The two scheduled a new meeting today to be followed by a public statement of results.

No sensational announcements were anticipated, but Nixon set the tone at the outset when he greeted Park with the assurance that "we shall be proud to stand together with you and your people in the future" against any danger from the Communists in the North.

After their first full private discussion, White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said they had dealt with the northern threat and an up-grading of U.S.-provided arms for South Korean forces.

New equipment including an initial shipment of F4 Phantom jet fighters will be going to South Korea shortly, Ziegler said.

In reply to a question about possible withdrawal of some of the 50,000 American troops in South Korea when the Vietnam war ends, Ziegler said, "There was no discussion of the American troop commitment to the Republic of Korea."

South Korea has approximately 50,000 troops on duty with the Americans in Vietnam.

Ziegler expressed belief that the U.S. level of military assistance to South Korea would remain at about the present $160 million annually.

The conference was marked by traditional pomp and ceremony and honey family touches behind a shield of tight security.

President Park brought his wife, and President Nixon brought his wife and family.

After resting Wednesday night in the quiet luxury of Del Monte lodge on the Monterey Peninsula, Park traveled by helicopter 100 miles north to the San Francisco's Presidio, headquarters of the 6th Army.

It shocked and angered many Czechs who remembered all too well how Soviet tanks took over the city and the country on Aug. 20-21 last year.

After five hours of maneuvering in the streets and spotlighting some apartment house windows, the tanks rolled back across the Vltava River and out of the city.

The other army units also departed. Street cleaners began clearing away the debris left by the rioting in which the public showed its frustration at a year of occupation and increasing accommodation to Soviet direction.

Five Killed
Prague Radio said five persons had been killed in riots—two youths 18 and 19 in Prague Wednesday night, and three persons in Brno on Thursday. The broadcast said 12 persons were injured in Brno.

Thousands of young Czechs clashed in Prague with the helmeted riot police, but many thousands more citizens demonstrated in more passive fashion.

They responded with obvious enthusiasm to underground leaflets urging them to turn the anniversary into a "day of shame" with boycotts of public transport and stores. Streets were almost empty, and stores were nearly deserted.

More than 40,000 massed in Wenceslas Square. Crowds of youths resisted clouds of tear gas and truncheons of the security forces who finally cleared the city center.

Husak Traitor
The demonstrators chanted that Husak was a traitor, sang the national anthem and shouted "Russians go home!" Over and over they cried "Long live Dubcek!" in tribute to Alexander Dubcek, the popular reformer that Husak replaced in April.

"It was an important occasion for the people," a woman said. "We are being told now so much about the invasion being justified we started having doubts. On Thursday we found out that even after a year everybody still agrees it was a terrible thing—we found out we still agree with each other."

In Bratislava, the Slovak capital, there also were clashes with police. Shots were fired over the heads of demonstrators, and arrests were made.

In Brno, Czechoslovakia's second largest city, witnesses reported that a young man poured gasoline on his clothes and set himself afire. They said the flames were quickly extinguished and the man carried off.

Youths threw three cobblestones at police who dispersed about 5,000 demonstrators with tear gas and baton charges.

In a statement today, the presidium warned that "if the counterrevolutionary elements attempt to appear again publicly, even more drastic steps will be taken and those taking part in such actions will be punished severely."

B-Specials Told Surrender Arms

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain's military commander in Northern Ireland ordered the vast majority of the controversial all-Protestant police reserves today to surrender their weapons.

The province's Roman Catholic minority had blamed the B-Specials, for most of the eight dead in last week's Protestant riots. The specials number about 8,400.

Lt. Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, commander-in-chief and newly assigned head of all internal security said the order means also that no armed specials will be operating on the streets of Belfast, Londonderry and other cities, starting tonight.

He said the specials' duties in Belfast would be limited to guarding docks and other vulnerable points.

The general's action is almost certain to bring a furious, negative response from militant Protestants who regard the force as Northern Ireland's main bulwark against riots and republican subversion.

Freeland's order does not disband the B-force. It removes it from the delicate areas of cities where most of the violence has occurred and puts its arms in storage. B-men guarding installations and roads in the countryside will be permitted to keep their arms.

Northern Ireland's religious leaders asked, meantime, that the British army act against terrorism in the back streets of the countryside.

and don't seem to know what to do about it I just shout at them. Such phrases as 'My brakes don't work' or 'I can't steer' have been most effective."

Races will be run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Most of the entrants are college students who work as boatmeeters during their summer vacations.

The winner will pedal away with the first prize—a new, unscarred set of luggage.

Lions Sponsored
This year the local Lion's Club is sponsoring the Bicycle Bellhop-Boatmeeter Derby. On Saturday, Aug. 23, cyclists will load six pieces of luggage and race the length of the course dodging horse carriages and pedestrians.

"We have a traffic ordinance regulating bicycle loads, of course, but they can still pile up a lot of luggage," said race commissioner W. T. Rabe.

"Their skill is almost unbelievable at maintaining a precarious balance, much less maneuvering through heavy pedestrian, bicycle and horse traffic, as well as shouting invective at dogs and small boys with sticky fingers."

Veteran cyclist Benjamin Thomas, Jr., of Big Rapids, Mich., attributes his skill in boatmeetering to "strong legs, strong will, strong sense of balance, and a very strong vocabulary."

Strong Offense
He said the greatest professional hazard for a boatmeeter is visitors who are under the impression that because there are no motor vehicles on Mackinac Island, there are no traffic rules.

River Surges Through Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The swollen James River, grinding trees, bridges and buildings into rubble, continued its destructive surge through Virginia today toward a crest here expected to reach a record 31 feet—22 feet above flood stage.

In its wake 46 persons were known dead and about 100 were missing in western Virginia, the area hardest hit by heavy rainfall and flash floods blamed on the remnants of Hurricane Camille.

Late Thursday night came fears of disaster from new sources.

State police reported three 1,000-gallon propane gas tanks and 10 smaller ones, all described as "highly explosive and extremely hazardous," were missing and "presumed gone down the James River" from a plant in Buena Vista in mountainous western Virginia.

In Richmond, the James River's rise had slowed to fractions by early today. It went up just one-tenth of a foot between 3 and 4 a.m., to 28.4 feet—a record—and officials speculated it might be near its crest.

Normal depth is nine feet. Danger from sodium cyanide missing with flood waters abated also, as Army disposal experts from nearby Ft. Lee helped Richmond firemen move the chemical from a plant. A fire department spokesman said there "was no public danger."

The cyanide had permeated several square blocks with its acrid fumes before firemen arrived. The area was cordoned off after officials of the metal plating plant where the chemicals were stored said the cyanide pellets could react with flood waters to form lethal hydrogen cyanide.

"Everything that stuff touches it would kill," said a plant official.

Workmen labored around the clock in Richmond to throw up earthen dikes. Low-lying industrial and residential areas were evacuated.

Bodies were fished from flood waters and uncovered from landslides in the mountain hamlets and towns where the flooding began with no warning late Tuesday night.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, were homeless and staying in churches and other emergency shelters.

State police said at least 100 persons were missing, and one rescue worker said, "There are people under those slides we'll never find."

After a 500-mile aerial tour of the James River basin, Gov. Mills E. Godwin declared the entire region a disaster area and immediately asked President Nixon to implement federal emergency aid.

Israeli Group To Probe Fire

JERUSALEM (AP) — Still enraged by the fire in Jerusalem's 1,400-year-old Al Aksah Mosque, several hundred Arab youths boxed in a group of Israeli troops near the walls of the Old City today and showered rocks and sticks on them.

The troops fired volleys of machine-gun bullets above their heads but were forced to retreat inside the gates of the Old City.

Israeli security forces closed the gates. Inside Defense Minister Moshe Dayan was reported keeping a close watch on the explosive situation.

The outbreak followed Friday Moslem prayers in the Dome of the Rock Mosque, which is 500 feet north of the Al Aksah Mosque.

The Israeli government had put a curfew on the Moslem holy place after the fire Thursday but lifted it today for the weekly prayer service.

As hundreds of Moslems poured out of the mosque through the narrow alleys of Old Jerusalem, group of Arab youths began chanting and stoning Israeli troops.

An Israeli captain was reportedly injured.

Gunfire crackled over the city as troops dispersed the rioters, chasing some youths along the streets.

Security forces threw up roadblocks on the outskirts of the city to prevent Arabs entering from the occupied West Bank.

The Israeli supreme court appointed a special committee Thursday night to investigate the fire.

Seabees Clearing Camille's Ruins

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — The storm-shattered 20-mile stretch of coast west of here was clear of most refugees today while soldiers and Seabees bulldozed wreckage in the final stages of a search for more victims of Hurricane Camille.

About 1,600 persons who had drifted back despairingly to inspect what used to be home had been shifted out of Pass Christian, Bay St. Louis and nearby points to refugee centers.

Gov. John Bell Williams said a minimum of 230 were known dead along the Mississippi coast.

Including those killed in Louisiana when Camille moved inland and others drowned in Camille-caused floods in Virginia and West Virginia, the toll was believed to be well over 300.

Due to erratic communications there was still no exact count of the number who had been found in Mississippi, placed in somber black death bags and taken to makeshift morgues, pending identification.

But the swelling tide of aid from the outside was showing results.

Just Beginning
Navy Capt. James M. Hill Jr., commanding the 800 Seabees engaged in the search and rescue operation in the area stretching from Gulfport to Bay St. Louis, said he expected to complete it today.

"I think by then we will have pretty well swept the area," said Hill, who had another 900 Seabees engaged in cleanup work elsewhere along the coast.

The Seabees, equipped with bulldozers, trucks, front loaders and forklifts, were joined by a 700-man Army engineer construction battalion from Ft. Benning, Ga., who brought in 189 pieces of heavy equipment.

"I feel that we are just beginning to get something accomplished," said Williams, who has been directing emergency operations out of headquarters at the Gulfport municipal airport.

Dr. Frank Wiygul, state health director, said the potentially hazardous health situation along the coast was under control with no signs of epidemic.

The survey of damage was far from complete but the Red Cross said its preliminary count showed 4,717 homes destroyed on Mississippi's coast and in Louisiana's Plaquemine Parish (county), a flat strip along both

Lazaros Cited For Contempt Of Grand Jury

DETROIT (AP) — A self-styled former Mafia member was cited Thursday for contempt of a federal grand jury investigating charges of corruption involving Internal Revenue Service (IRS) agents and Detroit Mayor Jerome P. Cavanagh.

The witness, Peter Lazaros, 36, faces a possible 11 months imprisonment—the term of the grand jury—if a federal judge decides he failed to purge himself of contempt by finally talking to the jury. A hearing on the contempt citation was adjourned until Monday.

Lazaros appeared before the grand jury three times Thursday. The first time, he refused to answer all questions, claiming the constitutional protection against self-incrimination.

Following the session, Assistant U. S. Atty. Gen. O'Leary requested that Lazaros be granted immunity from prosecution on all charges other than perjury which might arise from his testimony. The immunity was granted after an hour-long open hearing by U. S. District Judge Thomas P. Thornton, who ordered Lazaros to return to the grand jury.

Some of the secret testimony given to the jury was disclosed at the contempt hearings.

The second jury session lasted about 35 minutes and centered on a Christmas party given at the Kingsley Inn in suburban Bloomfield Hills Dec. 17, 1967.

Following this session, O'Leary asked that Lazaros be cited for contempt on the grounds that he was giving evasive answers.

Demonstrations Uncover Deep, Tense Division

PRAGUE (AP) — Tanks and troops pulled out of Prague today after demonstrations on the first anniversary of the Soviet invasion underlining the deep division between the Czechoslovak people and their Communist government.

Communist party leader Gustav Husak's regime sent tens of thousands of Czechoslovak soldiers and 60 tanks into downtown Prague Thursday night in a massive demonstration of military strength.

It shocked and angered many Czechs who remembered all too well how Soviet tanks took over the city and the country on Aug. 20-21 last year.

Escape From Gulfport:

They Saw Hurricane Destroy Hometown

By JANET VERTREES

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hirn and children, Kathy 19 and Steve, 15, victims of the worst hurricane in Mississippi's history, are now visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Augie Gafner of 826 S. 15th St., Escanaba.

The Hirns are from Gulfport where damage is estimated in the millions.

Mrs. Hirn is the former Ilse Neuman of Escanaba. She graduated from Escanaba high school and was employed at the Fair Store. Mr. Hirn is a graduate of St. Joseph's High School, Escanaba; Kathy is a sophomore at the University of Southern Mississippi; and Steve is attending high school in Gulfport.

Food For Two Days

At 7 p. m. Sunday evening the word was definite that hurricane "Camille" was going to hit Gulfport, they said. Before evacuating their home, the Hirns were instructed to remove their TV antenna, board or tape up their windows and to draw water in containers and mattresses to provide for the shortage that would follow the storm.

They took a blanket, pillow, and food for two days for each person in the family. Families were kept close together in hallways throughout the school. Many people brought transistor radios to keep themselves posted on the damage that was being done around the city. Power lines were down so the local radio stations were off but they received emergency broadcasts from New Orleans, La.

Lumber yards were opened on Sunday to accommodate local residents in the emergency. Hospital patients were flown by helicopter to New Orleans hospitals due to damage of the Gulfport hospital.

Buildings Floated By

Steve was the only member of the family who wanted to remain with his belongings but he was outnumbered and finally agreed to move to the shelter. While at the shelter, he stood in a protected area outside the building and watched the storm destroy most of his home town.

Mrs. Hirn said she saw the weather station float by the shelter while the family was held up for the night.

The actual storm started at 11 p. m. Sunday evening and by Monday morning the town was flattened.

The problem now is — Where are the homeless going to live? Because the food stores were demolished, food is scarce and what food could be saved will sell fast, the Hirns said. Persons with electric stoves are cooking on charcoal burners.

They plan to fill the trunk of their car with charcoal and canned goods before they leave for home on Monday. Many gas stations have no power to run their pumps. The Hirns bought gasoline from a friend, who had gas in his boat, to get them out of the destroyed area.

Winds 190 MPH

Most of the damage was to resort areas along the seaboard. A four-lane highway was completely destroyed by the water that was caused by the force of the high winds. Chunks of the seawall just floated down the street and 80-foot trees were split in half, the Hirns reported.

The neighbor of the Hirns left his Volkswagen at home and drove his other car to a shelter where it was struck by a falling tree. When he returned to his flattened home, his Volkswagen was also demolished.

The insurance companies will not take claims on destruction caused by water, only wind, so most of the people of Gulfport have to dig themselves out of the damage.

The Hirns were very fortunate because flood damage was within one block of their home but nothing of their's was damaged by water or wind. Twenty foot waves and 150-190 mph winds were reported in the Gulfport area.

Life will be difficult even for those whose homes were not damaged because air conditioning is impossible and the temperatures are about 90 degrees throughout the day and night. Due to flooding, the humidity has risen to an almost unbearable stage, they said.

Fear Typhoid

Many fatal injuries occurred during this mishap but all persons were given equal warning. Police tried to force many people to evacuate to the shelters but it is hard to leave everything you have worked and saved for in a life time and return to perhaps nothing, they said.

Not only people but animals were affected by the flood and wind damage. Squirrels, for instance, have no trees to live in. There is a possibility that typhoid shots may have to be administered to residents because rats and snakes have appeared due to high waters and lack of food.

Possibly there will be no schools open to start the fall semester as there is such a shortage of food and water and damages that must be repaired. Mail service will be slow in making a come back due to impassable roads and sidewalks, said the Hirns.

About 8-10 hurricanes are plotted each year usually during the months of September and October. Most of the time people make a holiday out of the warnings because school and work are called off until the danger has passed.

But this time there is no refrigeration, no electricity, little water and a lot of damage.

Living Costs Up .5% For July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another rapid advance in July for the cost of living, up five-tenths of one per cent over June, was reported today by the Labor Department.

The increase resulted primarily from higher prices for food and services, but practically everything else was up, too.

The only significant price declines were for used cars and gasoline. The reductions for gasoline were centered in the Midwest and West and resulted from a competitive situation in the area.

The cost of living index rose to 128.2, meaning that it cost $12.82 in July for every $10 worth of goods and services in the 1957-59 period, on which the index is based.

The July index for all items was 5/8 per cent above a year ago.

Arnold Chase, assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, told a news conference that prices are climbing at a 6 per cent annual rate, based on the increase from June to July. This year's living cost increases are the highest in 18 years.

No Change
Asked about any signs of a change, Chase replied, "I don't see any significant change of direction in price data for July." He said that August prices undoubtedly will increase, "but we have no information as yet what the rate will be."

A further boost in meat and poultry prices led to a 1 per cent rise in food costs during the month. Chase said that the cost of frying chickens increased 3.9 per cent, twice their usual increase.

"This obviously is a result of the shift from higher priced red meat to poultry," he said.

Prices of most fresh fruits and vegetables also were higher, but their increases were smaller than usual for July.

Offset Pay
The cost of home ownership, rents and housekeeping services also rose.

The purchasing power of rank and file workers remained virtually the same between June and July, as a gain in take-home pay was offset by the rise in consumer prices, the Labor Department said.

Gross weekly earnings rose to $115.44 in July, an increase of 68 cents from June and $6.57, or 6 per cent, from a year ago. The pickup resulted from a one-tenth of 1 per cent hour in the work week and a one-cent rise in hourly earnings. After adjustment for price changes, weekly earnings were slightly above the June level.

State Okays College Bonds

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley, chairman of the Municipal Finance Commission, announced today that the Commission approved $525,000 of Community College Building Bonds for Bay de Noc Community College, Delta County.

"The proceeds will be used to erect, furnish and equip additional community college buildings, and develop and improve sites. These bonds are unlimited tax bonds and will run until 1984. The bonds are payable primarily from a 2 1/2 mill levy authorized by the taxpayers of the district," Kelley said.

Other members of the Municipal Finance Commission are Allison Green, state treasurer, and Ira Polley, superintendent of public instruction.

State Reports 26 Small Game Mishaps

MARQUETTE — A total of 26 small game and deer hunting accidents occurred in the Upper Peninsula last hunting season (1968-69), according to investigating State Police and Conservation officers.

Three of the 26 occurred during deer hunting, one was a revolver-holster accident, and the remaining 22 were classified as small game hunting accidents.

The three deer hunting accidents reported were the lowest number ever reported in the Upper Peninsula. In the past 20 years, the highest number was 27 in 1954. There has been a steady decline since that time. Six were reported in 1967.

Department of Natural Resources and State Police officials commend the deer hunters in the U.P. for their care with firearms.

Public and Parochial schools have regularly scheduled the DNR hour-long "Hunter Safety Program" for their junior and senior high school students since 1952 and believe this has much to do with the reduction of firearm hunting accidents during that period.

Twenty schools in the U.P. have been scheduled for the department's safety program during the second week of September, according to Regional Information Officer, Paul V. Chal-

Escape From Gulfport:

They Saw Hurricane Destroy Hometown

By JANET VERTREES

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hirm and children, Kathy 19 and Steve, 15, victims of the worst hurricane in Mississippi's history, are now visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Augie Gafner of 826 S. 15th St., Escanaba.

The Hirms are from Gulfport where damage is estimated in the millions.

Mrs. Hirm is the former Ilse Neuman of Escanaba. She graduated from Escanaba high school and was employed at the Fair Store. Mr. Hirm is a graduate of St. Joseph's High School, Escanaba; Kathy is a sophomore at the University of Southern Mississippi; and Steve is attending high school in Gulfport.

Food For Two Days

At 7 p.m. Sunday evening the word was definite that hurricane "Camille" was going to hit Gulfport, they said. Before evacuating their home, the Hirms were instructed to remove their TV antenna, board or tape up their windows and to draw water in containers and math tubs to provide for the shortage that would follow the storm.

They took a blanket, pillow, and food for two days for each person in the family. Families were kept close together in hallways throughout the school. Many people brought transistor radios to keep themselves posted on the damage that was being done around the city. Power lines were down so the local radio stations were off but they received emergency broadcasts from New Orleans, La.

Lumber yards were opened on Sunday to accommodate local residents in the emergency. Hospital patients were flown by helicopter to New Orleans hospitals due to damage of the Gulfport hospital.

Buildings Floated By

Steve was the only member of the family who wanted to remain with his belongings but he was outnumbered and finally agreed to move to the shelter. While at the shelter, he stood in a protected area outside the building and watched the storm destroy most of his home town.

Mrs. Hirm said she saw the weather station float by the shelter while the family was held up for the night.

The actual storm started at 11 p.m. Sunday evening and by Monday morning the town was flattened.

The problem now is — Where are the homeless going to live? Because the food stores were demolished, food is scarce and what food could be saved will sell fast, the Hirms said. Persons with electric stoves are cooking on charcoal burners.

They plan to fill the trunk of their car with charcoal and canned goods before they leave for home on Monday. Many gas stations were ruined. Remaining ones have no power to run their pumps. The Hirms bought gasoline from a friend, who had gas in his boat, to get them out of the destroyed area.

Winds 190 MPH

Most of the damage was to resort areas along the seaboard. A four-lane highway was completely destroyed by the water that was caused by the force of the high winds. Chunks of the seawall just floated down the street and 80-foot trees were split in half, the Hirms reported.

The neighbor of the Hirms left his Volkswagen at home and drove his other car to a shelter where it was struck by a falling tree. When he returned to his flattened home, his Volkswagen was also demolished.

The insurance companies will not take claims on destruction caused by water, only wind, so most of the people of Gulfport have to dig themselves out of the damage.

The Hirms were very fortunate because flood damage was within one block of their home but nothing of their's was damaged by water or wind. Twenty foot waves and 150-190 mph winds were reported in the Gulfport area.

Life will be difficult even for those whose houses were not damaged because air conditioning is impossible and the temperatures are about 90 degrees throughout the day and night. Due to flooding, the humidity has risen to an almost unbearable stage, they said.

Fear Typhoid

Many fatal injuries occurred during this mishap but all persons were given equal warning. Police tried to force many people to evacuate to the shelters but it is hard to leave everything you have worked and saved for in a life time and return to perhaps nothing, they said.

Not only people but animals were affected by the flood and wind damage. Squirrels, for instance, have no trees to live in. There is a possibility that typhoid shots may have to be administered to residents because rats and snakes have appeared due to high waters and lack of food.

Possibly there will be no schools open to start the fall semester as there is such a shortage of food and water and damages that must be repaired. Mail service will be slow in making a come back due to impassable roads and sidewalks, said the Hirms.

About 8-10 hurricanes are plotted each year usually during the months of September and October. Most of the time people make a holiday out of the warnings because school and work are called off until the danger has passed.

But this time there is no refrigeration, no electricity, little water and a lot of damage.

Unique 5.5 Fleet Set For Mallory Cup Races

MENOMINEE — A highly improbable series of events, starting with an Olympic gold medal winner and involving a staggering cash outlay, will result in the 18th sailing of the Mallory Cup races.

Officially known as the Men's North American Sailing Championship, the races will be held Aug. 25-29 off the Menominee Marina on Green Bay. They are traditionally sailed in boats of one class which are rotated among the competing crews so that sailing skills can be judged as evenly as possible.

This year, the races will be sailed in a one-of-a-kind fleet of ten International 5.5 meter sailboats bought by members of the M & M Yacht Club in 1965. Ordinarily, 5.5 meter boats are not identical, but are built within a rule which allows for small differences in length, waterline and rigging.

However, in 1962, an Olympic sailing gold medal winner decided to have ten identical 5.5's built as part of a training program for the 1964 Olympic sailing competition. He was Herman "Swede" Whiton, who commissioned naval architect Bill Luders to design the boats and then had them built by Bjarnasaas in Norway in 1962. Whiton also established the United States Sail Training Facility in Oyster Bay, N.Y., where the boats were used to train skippers and crews for the 1964 Olympics.

After the Olympic interest died and the fleet was put on the block in Aug. 1965, Whiton stipulated that they must be bought and sailed together as a fleet. Resale of separate boats was forbidden.

Although it was estimated that the boats had cost $200,000 to build, the fleet was priced for sale at $30,000. M & M Yacht Club members called the broker handling the fleet on the first day it was advertised for sale and sent a deposit the next day. Four days later, when the club's representatives went to Oyster Bay to close the sale, they were offered $10,000 for one boat and $6,000 apiece for three others by several prospective buyers.

However, the 5.5 Meter Association, formed by the nine yacht club members who now own boats, has kept to both the letter and spirit of the original sale agreement. Eight of the ten boats are being sailed regularly in competition this summer. No. 35 and No. 40, owned by Richard Bargen and Roger Derusha respectively, are now tied for first place in the summer racing series.

The association has also bought ten identical sets of sails, mainsails, jib and spinnaker, to prepare the boats for the Mallory Cup races. Made by Hard Sails Inc. of New York, the sails have been used only for the Tuesday night racing series. They are a basic part of the plan for the Mallory Cup races because the boats must be identical in rigging and equipment as close as possible.

COMPETITION BOAT — One of the 5.5 square meter boats to be used in the Mallory Cup races flies a spinnaker on a broad reach sailing off the Menominee shore of Green Bay. Rigging and equipment must be identical on the eight boats used in the races. This is "Our Son" owned by James Derusha of Marinette, Wis.

Retailers Plan Special Events

The Retail Division of the Escanaba Area Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a treasure hunt for members of the Avion Travel Club who will hold a rally at the U. P. State Fair Grounds Sept. 11-15.

Gift certificates to be redeemed for merchandise at participating stores will be given to each trailer. Details were finalized at a meeting of the division held at the Sherman Hotel Thursday noon. Mrs. Angelina Hakes, chairman of the division, said that the Chamber will furnish the number of certificates desired to each participating store.

Retailers were reminded of the get-acquainted Farmer-Businessmen's picnic at the U. P. State Fair Grounds Sunday, Aug. 24 from 1-4 p. m.

Coming events on the retail promotion schedule announced by Chairman Hakes included a night opening for stores Tuesday, Sept. 2, the first day of school; a September Escanaba Day, and the Teachers Convention Oct. 2 and 3; an October Dollar day and a November License to Save promotion.

A bulletin prepared by the Michigan Retailers Association, "Shoplifting Is a Crime," has been purchased in quantity and sides of the Mississippi River south of New Orleans.

In addition, 9,718 homes suffered major damage, the survey revealed. Most of the homes were in Mississippi's coastal area, now under martial law and a 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. curfew.

Williams said about 400 truckloads of food had reached the area, with the first trainload of food and supplies scheduled to arrive today.

About 250 military planes had airlifted 2,750 tons of supplies into the area and some 600 private planes had shuttled in more than 300 tons of medicine and food.

A force of approximately 800 telephone and power company linemen from neighboring states struggled to expand communications and restore power.

The stench of death remained heavy in many areas. Carcasses of dogs, horses, cows, pigs, and rats, opossums, along with fish cast ashore by raging tides, were being covered with lime.

Rapid River Resident Dies

Mrs. Hilda I. Carlson, 76, a long time Rapid River resident, died early this morning at St. Francis Hospital.

Unique 5.5 Fleet Set For Mallory Cup Races

MENOMINEE — A highly improbable series of events, starting with an Olympic gold medal winner and involving a staggering cash outlay, will result in the 18th sailing of the Mallory Cup races.

Officially known as the Men's North American Sailing Championship, the races will be held Aug. 25-29 off the Menominee Marina on Green Bay. They are traditionally sailed in boats of one class which are rotated among the competing crews so that sailing skills can be judged as evenly as possible.

This year, the races will be sailed in a one-of-a-kind fleet of ten International 5.5 meter sailboats bought by members of the M & M Yacht Club in 1965. Ordinarily, 5.5 meter boats are not identical, but are built within a rule which allows for small differences in length, waterline and rigging.

However, in 1962, an Olympic sailing gold medal winner decided to have ten identical 5.5's built as part of a training program for the 1964 Olympic sailing competition. He was Herman "Swede" Whiton, who commissioned naval architect Bill Luders to design the boats and then had them built by Bjornasas in Norway in 1962. Whiton also established the United States Sail Training Facility in Oyster Bay, N.Y., where the boats were used to train skippers and crews for the 1964 Olympics.

After the Olympic interest died and the fleet was put on the block in Aug. 1965, Whiton stipulated that they must be bought and sailed together as a fleet. Resale of separate boats was forbidden.

Although it was estimated that the boats had cost $200,000 to build, the fleet was priced for sale at $30,000. M & M Yacht Club members called the broker handling the fleet on the first day it was advertised for sale and sent a deposit the next day. Four days later, when the club's representatives went to Oyster Bay to close the sale, they were offered $10,000 for one boat and $6,000 apiece for three others by several prospective buyers.

However, the 5.5 Meter Association, formed by the nine yacht club members who now own boats, has kept to both the letter and spirit of the original sale agreement. Eight of the ten boats are being sold regularly in competition this summer. No. 35 and No. 40, owned by Richard Bargren and Roger Derusha respectively, are now tied for first place in the summer racing series.

The association has also bought ten identical sets of sails, mainsails, jib and spinnaker, to prepare the boats for the Mallory Cup races. Made by Hard Sails Inc. of New York, the sails have been used only for the Tuesday night racing series. They are a basic part of the plan for the Mallory Cup races because the boats must be identical in rigging and equipment as close as possible.

COMPETITION BOAT — One of the 5.5 square meter boats to be used in the Mallory Cup races flies a spinnaker on a broad reach sailing off the Menominee shore of Green Bay. Rigging and equipment must be identical on the eight boats used in the races. This is "Our Son" owned by James Derusha of Marinette, Wis.

Retailers Plan Special Events

The Retail Division of the Escanaba Area Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a treasure hunt for members of the Avion Travel Club who will hold a rally at the U. P. State Fair Grounds Sept. 11-15.

Gift certificates to be redeemed for merchandise at participating stores will be given to each trailer. Details were finalized at a meeting of the division held at the Sherman Hotel Thursday noon. Mrs. Angeline Hakes, chairman of the division, said that the Chamber will furnish the number of certificates desired to each participating store.

Retailers were reminded of the get-acquainted Farmer-Businessmen's picnic at the U. P. State Fair Grounds Sunday, Aug. 24 from 1-4 p. m.

Coming events on the retail promotion schedule announced by Chairman Hakes included a night opening for stores Tuesday, Sept. 2, the first day of school; a September Escanaba Day, and the Teachers Convention Oct. 2 and 3; an October Dollar day and a November License to Save promotion.

Williams said about 400 truckloads of food had reached the area, with the first trainload of food and supplies scheduled to arrive today.

About 250 military planes had airlifted 2,750 tons of supplies into the area and some 600 private planes had shuttled in more than 300 tons of medicine and food.

A force of approximately 800 telephone and power company linemen from neighboring states struggled to expand communications and restore power.

Pollution Control

Natural resources and industry are wedded as naturally as chickens and eggs.

The preservation of a healthy ecological balance in nature is as essential to industry and jobs as a healthy hen is to the production of eggs — and there is a growing public awareness of what is at stake if our natural environment continues to be seriously damaged.

Not only will the vital materials upon which industry feeds become scarce, but the people themselves will sicken and die with the destruction of those conditions that make human life possible.

The Michigan Water Resources Commission has concluded a hearing in Escanaba that is historic in its consideration of vital issues of pollution control, technical philosophies, and the welfare of the human animal.

Industry is not the cause of pollution. Industry is an instrument used by human society to achieve economic benefits and civilizing comforts. The cause is the determined greed and avarice of a people who would use industry for those purposes — without care for the quality of the air, the water, the land that supports all life.

Do people really care about what is happening to our lakes and rivers? To the plants and animals? To man's close relationship with nature and how it is changing as the result of technological advancement?

We think they do, and this concern is expressed in many ways, both as individuals, as groups, and in their government.

Crystal Lake is near Frankfort on the east shore of Lake Michigan. It is a beautiful lake. You can still see the bottom in many places, even at considerable depth.

Four young men — graduate students at the University of Michigan — are joining with a citizens committee to fight water pollution there. The lake is popular with vacationers, for swimming, boating, fishing. But algae growth is appearing here and there — sure sign of pollution.

The people around Crystal Lake do care. They went door to door, raised $13,500 to support the study to "Keep Crystal Clear" and donated boats and equipment and personally helped the researchers from the U. of M. who are directed by a professor of public health engineer. They'll have a report ready later this year, and it can be assumed that the Crystal Lake people (who cared enough to get the study off the ground) will follow through with corrective measures.

There's a pioneering spirit evident in the land on the problem of pollution control.

People want something done that is essential to all of us: The preservation of a land not yet totally corrupted by discharge of poisonous wastes. They want to be able to see the bottom of a lake, fish for fish that in themselves are not scavengers feeding on dirt, and breathe air that is healthful, not harmful.

The technological knowledge in America, if applied to the correction of some of the present pollution problems, could alleviate if not solve them. And we don't agree with the frightened little voices that advocate doing nothing because pollution control jars the economy.

E. M. Laitala of Hancock, member of the State Natural Resources Commission, was outspoken at the hearing in Escanaba conducted by the Water Resources Commission.

Appearing as an individual in connection with the hearing to set water purity standards for streams and lakes affected by Upper Peninsula iron and copper mining operations, Laitala said:

"We who live in these underdeveloped areas of the north too readily give up our birthright and sell our souls for some transitory economic benefit to our immediate generation, without thought for scores of others that may follow."

And he was critical of a technology that knows how to exploit but is incapable of doing other than passing the problem of pollution along to someone else.

The challenge is to pioneer new ways of waste disposal. Must noxious fumes be disposed of by diffusion into the air? Is there not a better method of caring for human waste than diluting it and flushing it into a body of water?

Such questions are a challenge not only to technology but to the body of Americans who must, if new methods of pollution control are to be achieved, agree to the drastic changes required by effective abatement of pollution.

An exact model of the Mackinac Bridge will be on exhibit in the Detroit Coliseum during the 120th Michigan State Fair Aug. 22-Sept. 1. The five-mile length of Mighty Mac and its approach spans is duplicated by the model which is 25 feet long — 1,000 times smaller than the actual bridge. One side of the model is a realistic view, showing the blue water of the Straits of Mackinac. The other side is a cutaway, revealing the foundations which extend down as far as 210 feet to bedrock and make up three-fourths of the bridge weight. The entire bridge is reproduced, from the south shore in Mackinac City to the fare plaza near St. Ignace, including the record length 8,614-foot suspension bridge. The model was built for the Mackinac Bridge Authority by one of the world's foremost model makers, Frederick Fredhois, Oslo, Norway, at a cost of $17,000.

A first degree murder charge against Leo L. Dembowski, 49, of Forest Park, Ill., in the slaying of Mrs. Delia J. Walencik, 52, Hurley, Wis., whose body was found July 14 in a garbage dump, has been dismissed by Judge Arne H. Wicklund in Iron County, Wis., Court. "There are too many possibilities and not enough probabilities to warrant binding the defendant over for trial on circumstantial evidence," the judge said. Dembowski was released.

JUST A REMINDER

Saigon Prospers In Vietnam Non-War

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Vicente Villamin, a columnist for Examiner: The Asia Weekly in the Philippine Islands, sends me his material from time to time. His insights differ from those that appear in the American press, and one is sometimes at a loss to know whether they represent Asian realism or merely a special quality of innocence deriving from the lucky fact that there is considerable blue water between the Philippines and mainland China.

But, innocent or wise, the Villamin slants are those of a uniquely endowed individual thinker.

Sometimes Villamin achieves his effect simply by proclaiming the naked king is indeed naked. For example, he observes, quite correctly, that the U.S. Congress has never declared war against North Vietnam, and that North Vietnam refuses to admit that it has any troops in South Vietnam. It follows from this set of circumstances that the U.S. is not fighting Ho Chi Minh. People are not exactly being non-killed, but it is a non-war.

Why, then, are the North Vietnamese sitting in Paris at a peace conference? Since there is no "war" going on, what is the sense of trying to produce a document to end a non-war?

Villamin has his tongue in his cheek, of course; maybe in both cheeks. But he is not being entirely facetious. As he says, there is no legal compulsion or political necessity for the U.S. to enter into a peace treaty with Hanoi.

Our dealings have been entirely with the South Vietnamese. We promised them that we would help them repel whoever has been beheading village leaders, seizing young men for impressment in guerrilla bands, and "taxing" people for a shadowy "government" that presumes to rule the jungle at night.

Our only commitment is to build up the strength of the Saigon government to the point where it can go it alone in dealing with what, to America, is the non-enemy that has never admitted to using the Ho Chi Minh trail. Once we have made Saigon self-sufficient in military power, we could simply depart.

Villamin looks forward to such a simple solution with relish. He foresees a time when the war in Southeast Asia will be "focalized and deglamorized." The world will then lose interest in it, the foreign journalists will happily return home. This is assuming, of course, that the Viet Cong is "contained" and that Ho Chi Minh, tired of throwing his young men into a jungle meat-chopper, will himself fade out of the picture or try the line of "peaceful reunification" of the two Vietnams.

Villamin does have one fear. He quotes a letter from an anonymous Saigon correspondent who says, "We don't want peace too soon...the people are benefiting greatly from the American money in circulation. Peace will be against our prosperity."

While one may be permitted to doubt that Saigon is yet within hailing distance of military self-sufficiency, it might pay our Paris negotiator, Henry Cabot Lodge, to try Villamin's line of reasoning on the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegates. Since Hanoi has been fighting a non-war by sending non-troops over the Ho Chi Minh trail to non-encampments

Braces On Teeth Is Status Symbol

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

Orthodontists say some parents now insist that braces be put on their children's teeth whether they need them or not. It seems that braces are now prestige symbols among the kids, and parents don't want anyone to get the idea their kids can't afford the best.

It is no longer necessary to make a better mouse trap in order to induce the world to beat a path to your door. All you have to do is put a swimming pool in your back yard.

There are two basic types of people: those who will tell you when you have a smudge on your nose, and those who just sit there looking at it and feeling superior.

A go-getter is a guy who early in life picks out the bench in the public park he plans to retire to at 65 and puts a "reserved" sign on it.

Mosquitoes provide an example of how the innocent suffer from guilt by association in this crass universe. Only the female mosquito stings man; the male mosquito is harmless. But few people take the trouble to become experts in the sex differences between mosquitoes, and the hapless male gets swatted as vigorously as the bloodthirsty female.

The surest signs of age among both men and women are the urge to save paper bags and string and the feeling that they are beginning to lose their memory.

Renown awaits the first surgeon who finds a way to transplant crabgrass to a bald human head and make it grow. At one stroke he'll solve two of civilization's most worrisome problems.

Second Martini
The biggest suspense at lunch among businessmen isn't over who'll be stuck with the check — it's the question as to who will first summon up the courage to order a second Martini, so the others can, too, and blame him later for the way they feel the rest of the afternoon.

There is no such thing as a surefire "governor cure. Military pilots swear by whiffs of oxygen. A morning can of cold tomato juice is recommended by many executives. A bottle of flat beer left overnight in the refrigerator has its advocates. But a well-known film star says this concoction has helped him survive: A raw egg, orange juice, and several tablespoonfuls of honey mixed in a blender. Add ice if desired.

The reason you learn more in the School of Hard Knocks is that class never lets out — and there are no summer vacations.

Contract Bridge

BIDDING QUIZ

You are South, neither side vulnerable. The bidding has been:

East South West North
1 ♠ 1 ♣ 1 ♠ 2 ♣
Pass ?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠Q6 ♥AQ85 ♦AK72 ♣J93
2. ♠AQ ♥83 ♦K64 ♣AKQ982
3. ♠85 ♥AKJ72 ♦A3 ♣KJ75
4. ♠7 ♥QJ93 ♦KQJ865 ♣AK

1. Pass. When you compete against an opponent's opening bid by doubling for takeout, and partner then responds in minimum terms—that is, by failing to make a jump bid or a cuebid—you must proceed on the basis that partner's response promises very little in the way of either high cards or distribution.

It follows that you should pass two hearts with this hand, despite the 16 high-card points, because the possibility of making four opposite a forced response is quite remote. As a matter of fact, there is some danger that partner cannot make even two hearts. You have quite a bundle of losers for partner to take care of, and it would be overly optimistic as well as dangerous to raise to three hearts.

2. Three notrump. While pessimism opposite partner's minimum response is generally a very healthy attitude to adopt, there is nonetheless such a thing as carrying it too far. Here you have eight probable tricks to start with, and while it is true that you may never make a ninth, the odds are that you will. Excessive caution can sometimes do more harm than good.

3. Three hearts. The most you can do here is raise to three hearts, which indicates a strong hand and requests partner to go on to four with only a few scattered values. This hand is far more promising than the first one, though the high-card point count is the same. There are many fewer losers in this case.

4. Four hearts. It is best to go all out with this one, even though East-West may have the A-K of hearts and two side aces. It is much too risky to bid only three hearts, since partner might pass with some dreadful hand that contained only the king of hearts or one of the three missing aces.

Even if it turns out that partner has none of the four key cards and goes down one, the loss is apt to be more fancied than real, since East-West in such case could almost surely make at least three spades or four clubs.

Woman Is Hooked On Her Diet Pills

Dear Ann Landers: I'm scared. Please help me. Is it possible to get hooked on diet pills? I've been taking them off and on for five years. The weight I wanted to lose is gone and there is no need to be on the pills any longer but I can't get off them. They give me a life, especially when it comes to sex.

Last week I tried to get along without pills and I couldn't do it. This is what scared me. The second day without pills I felt lethargic and depressed — not interested in anything — especially my husband. I told him I had a headache. The next day I went back on the pills.

I don't want to go to a doctor because I might get somebody in trouble. I get the pills from a friend who works in a drug store. What is in them that gives me such a boost? Am I hooked? — Unsigned

Dear Un: The pills probably contain dexadrene which can indeed be habit forming. Go to your doctor at once and ask him to help you kick the habit. It isn't essential to name your "friendly" druggist. But I can tell you, dear woman, what he did for you was no act of friendship.

Dear Ann Landers: A while back you printed a letter from a woman whose husband couldn't get a job because he had a prison record. DEFENSE TREATIES

The Defense Department has its ABM and flushed with "victory," apparently feels that it is now capable of getting away with anything. The other day the Senate Foreign Relations Committee asked to see the text of a secret 1965 defense agreement between the United States and Thailand.

The Defense Department refused to release the document. The reason? It seems that the contents of this agreement are too secret to be entrusted to the Senate of the United States! Senators Fulbright and Church immediately hit the ceiling; Senator Church flatly refusing to go to the Pentagon to see the suddenly available document and insisting, rightly, that the Defense Department bring the document to Congress.

More than just a question of protocol and procedure lies behind Senator Church's insistence. The Senate, which, according to what was taught in my high school Government class, has the important job of approving treaties, has had its authority severely weakened by this under-the-table agreement. What this amounts to in practice is a severe weakening of the American governmental principle of separation-of-powers.

The question which occurs to me is this: Where will this arrogance and absolutism end? Will the Defense Department next decide that its internal workings are too secret to be revealed to the President? The apologists for an increasingly elitist defense establishment have emerged from this incident with a rather conspicuous helping of egg on their faces. How anyone, including the sanctimonious Mr. Chamberlain, can still insist that the military - industrial-ect. complex does not influence foreign policy is quite beyond me.

The practice of allowing the Defense Department to sign treaties without Senate review should be seen for what it is; a callous abrogation of one of the basic governmental checks and balances clearly expressed in the Constitution. When one branch of government decides that it has the power to perform the functions of the other two, then totalitarianism is only a step behind. In an period of life with cries of "Law and Order" the key questions should be whose law and what kind of order. Think about it. Do we really want Melvin Laird as emperor.

New Law Revises State Banking

LANSING (AP) — Gov. William G. Milliken has signed a bill that substantially revises Michigan banking law and redesignates former Banking Commissioner Robert P. Briggs as financial institutions commissioner.

Under the act, effective immediately, Briggs is empowered to issue "cease and desist" orders to banks he judges to be acting improperly or of unsound financial condition.

Previously such an order could come only from a court after review of a petition by the commissioner.

The new act repealed Briggs' previous title. He was immediately sworn into the renamed position by Milliken.

Other measures signed today by Milliken will: —Amend the township rural zoning act to increase allowances from $10 to $25 per day for zoning board members and maximum annual compensation to $5,000. Immediate effect.

—Create a county election scheduling committee composed of the county clerk and three members appointed by the board of supervisors to deny holding of an election with 45 days of the date of its approval. Immediate effect.

—Permit a township board to install street lights outside incorporated village limits. Effective Nov. 1.

—Prohibit capture or killing of hawks, owls or eagles. —Prohibit deer hunting with .22 caliber rim fire pistols.

Pollution Control

Natural resources and industry are wedded as naturally as chickens and eggs. The preservation of a healthy ecological balance in nature is as essential to industry and jobs as a healthy hen is to the production of eggs — and there is a growing public awareness of what is at stake if our natural environment continues to be seriously damaged. Not only will the vital materials upon which industry feeds become scarce, but the people themselves will sicken and die with the destruction of those conditions that make human life possible. The Michigan Water Resources Commission has concluded a hearing in Escanaba that is historic in its consideration of vital issues of pollution control, technical philosophies, and the welfare of the human animal. Industry is not the cause of pollution. Industry is an instrument used by human society to achieve economic benefits and civilizing comforts. The cause is the determined greed and avarice of a people who would use industry for those purposes — without care for the quality of the air, the water, the land that supports all life.

Do people really care about what is happening to our lakes and rivers? To the plants and animals? To man's close relationship with nature and how it is changing as the result of technological advancement?

We think they do, and this concern is expressed in many ways, both as individuals, as groups, and in their government.

Crystal Lake is near Frankfort on the east shore of Lake Michigan. It is a beautiful lake. You can still see the bottom in many places, even at considerable depth.

Four young men — graduate students at the University of Michigan — are joining with a citizens committee to fight water pollution there. The lake is popular with vacationers, for swimming, boating, fishing. But algae growth is appearing here and there — sure sign of pollution.

The people around Crystal Lake do care. They went door to door, raised $13,500 to support the study to "Keep Crystal Clear" and donated boats and equipment and personally helped the researchers from the U. of M. who are directed by a professor of public health engineer. They'll have a report ready later this year, and it can be assumed that the Crystal Lake people (who cared enough to get the study off the ground) will follow through with corrective measures.

There's a pioneering spirit evident in the land on the problem of pollution control.

People want something done that is essential to all of us: The preservation of a land not yet totally corrupted by discharge of poisonous wastes. They want to be able to see the bottom of a lake, fish for fish that in themselves are not scavengers feeding on dirt, and breathe air that is healthful, not harmful.

The technological knowledge in America, if applied to the correction of some of the present pollution problems, could alleviate if not solve them. And we don't agree with the frightened little voices that advocate doing nothing because pollution control jars the economy.

E. M. Laitala of Hancock, member of the State Natural Resources Commission, was outspoken at the hearing in Escanaba conducted by the Water Resources Commission.

Appearing as an individual in connection with the hearing to set water purity standards for streams and lakes affected by Upper Peninsula iron and copper mining operations, Laitala said:

"We who live in these underdeveloped areas of the north too readily give up our birthright and sell our souls for some transitory economic benefit to our immediate generation, without thought for scores of others that may follow."

And he was critical of a technology that knows how to exploit but is incapable of doing other than passing the problem of pollution along to someone else.

The challenge is to pioneer new ways of waste disposal. Must noxious fumes be disposed of by diffusion into the air? Is there not a better method of caring for human waste than diluting it and flushing it into a body of water?

Such questions are a challenge not only to technology but to the body of Americans who must, if new methods of pollution control are to be achieved, agree to the drastic changes required by effective abatement of pollution.

An exact model of the Mackinac Bridge will be on exhibit in the Detroit Coliseum during the 120th Michigan State Fair Aug. 22-Sept. 1. The five-mile length of Mighty Mac and its approach spans is duplicated by the model which is 25 feet long — 1,000 times smaller than the actual bridge. One side of the model is a realistic view, showing the blue water of the Straits of Mackinac. The other side is a cutaway, revealing the foundations which extend down as far as 210 feet to bedrock and make up three-fourths of the bridge weight. The entire bridge is reproduced, from the south shore in Mackinac City to the fare plaza near St. Ignace, including the record length 8,614-foot suspension bridge. The model was built for the Mackinac Bridge Authority by one of the world's foremost model makers, Frederick Fredhois, Oslo, Norway, at a cost of $17,000.

A first degree murder charge against Leo L. Dembowski, 49, of Forest Park, Ill., in the slaying of Mrs. Delia J. Walencik, 52, Hurley, Wis., whose body was found July 14 in a garbage dump, has been dismissed by Judge Arne H. Wicklund in Iron County, Wis., Court. "There are too many possibilities and not enough probabilities to warrant binding the defendant over for trial on circumstantial evidence," the judge said. Dembowski was released.

JUST A REMINDER

Saigon Prospers In Vietnam Non-War

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Vicente Villamin, a columnist for Examiner: The Asia Weekly in the Philippine Islands, sends me his material from time to time. His insights differ from those that appear in the American press, and one is sometimes at a loss to know whether they represent Asian realism or merely a special quality of innocence deriving from the lucky fact that there is considerable blue water between the Philippines and mainland China.

But, innocent or wise, the Villamin slants are those of a uniquely endowed individual thinker.

Sometimes Villamin achieves his effect simply by proclaiming that the naked king is indeed naked. For example, he observes, quite correctly, that the U.S. Congress has never declared war against North Vietnam, and that North Vietnam refuses to admit that it has any troops in South Vietnam. It follows from this set of circumstances that the U.S. is not fighting Ho Chi Minh. People are not exactly being non-killed, but it is a non-war.

Why, then, are the North Vietnamese sitting in Paris at a peace conference? Since there is no "war" going on, what is the sense of trying to produce a document to end a non-war?

Villamin has his tongue in his cheek, of course; maybe in both cheeks. But he is not being entirely facetious. As he says, there is no legal compulsion or political necessity for the U.S. to enter into a peace treaty with Hanoi.

Our dealings have been entirely with the South Vietnamese. We promised them that we would help them repel whoever has been behaving village leaders, seizing young men for impressment in guerrilla bands, and "taxing" people for a shadowy "government" that presumes to rule the jungle at night.

Our only commitment is to build up the strength of the Saigon government to the point where it can go it alone in dealing with what, to America, is the non-enemy that has never admitted to using the Ho Chi Minh trail. Once we have made Saigon self-sufficient in military power, we could simply depart.

Villamin looks forward to such a simple solution with relish. He foresees a time when the war in Southeast Asia will be "focalized and deglamorized." The world will then lose interest in it, the foreign journalists will happily return home. This is assuming, of course, that the Viet Cong can be "contained" and that Ho Chi Minh, tired of throwing his young men into a jungle meat-chopper, will himself fade out of the picture or try the line of "peaceful reunification" of the two Vietnams.

Villamin does have one fear. He quotes a letter from an anonymous Saigon correspondent who says, "We don't want peace too soon...the people are benefiting greatly from the American money in circulation. Peace will be against our prosperity."

While one may be permitted to doubt that Saigon is yet within hailing distance of military self-sufficiency, it might pay our Paris negotiator, Henry Cabot Lodge, to try Villamin's line of reasoning on the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegates. Since Hanoi has been fighting a non-war by sending non-troops over the Ho Chi Minh trail to non-encampments

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions: Orthodontists say some parents now insist that braces be put on their children's teeth whether they need them or not. It seems that braces are now prestige symbols among the kids, and parents don't want anyone to get the idea their kids can't afford the best.

It is no longer necessary to make a better mouse trap in order to induce the world to beat a path to your door. All you have to do is put a swimming pool in your back yard. There are two basic types of people: those who will tell you when you have a smudge on your nose, and those who just sit there looking at it and feeling superior.

A go-getter is a guy who early in life picks out the bench in the public park he plans to retire to at 65 and puts a "reserved" sign on it.

Mosquitoes Mosquitoes provide an example of how the innocent suffer from guilt by association in this crass universe. Only the female mosquito stings man; the male mosquito is harmless. But few people take the trouble to become experts in the sex differences between mosquitoes, and the hapless male gets swatted as vigorously as the bloodthirsty female.

Second Martini

The biggest suspense at lunch among businessmen isn't over who'll be stuck with the check — it's the question as to who will first summon up the courage to order a second Martini, so the others can, too, and blame him later for the way they feel the rest of the afternoon.

There is no such thing as a surefire hangover cure. Military pilots swear by whiffs of oxygen. A morning can of cold tomato juice is recommended by many executives. A bottle of flat beer left overnight in the refrigerator has its advocates. But a well-known film star says this concoction has helped him survive: A raw egg, orange juice, and several tablespoons of honey mixed in a blender. Add ice if desired.

The reason you learn more in the School of Hard Knocks is that class never lets out — and there are no summer vacations.

BIDDING QUIZ

You are South, neither side vulnerable. The bidding has been:

East South West North
1♣ 4♠ Pass 2♥
Pass ?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

- 1. ♠Q6 ♥AQ5 ♦AKT2 ♣J93
- 2. ♠AQ ♥83 ♦K64 ♣AKQ982
- 3. ♠85 ♥AKJT2 ♦A3 ♣KJ75
- 4. ♠7 ♥QJ93 ♦KQJ865 ♣AK

1. Pass. When you compete against an opponent's opening bid by doubling for takeout, and partner then responds in minimum terms—that is, by failing to make a jump bid or a cuebid—you must proceed on the basis that partner's response promises very little in the way of either high cards or distribution.

It follows that you should pass two hearts with this hand, despite the 16 high-card points, because the possibility of making four opposite a forced response is quite remote. As a matter of fact, there is some danger that partner cannot make even two hearts. You have quite a bundle of losers for partner to take care of, and it would be overly optimistic as well as dangerous to raise to three hearts.

2. Three notrump. While pessimism opposite partner's minimum response is generally a very healthy attitude to adopt, there is nonetheless such a thing as carrying it too far. Here you have eight probable tricks to start with, and while it is true that you may never make a ninth, the odds are that you will. Excessive caution can sometimes do more harm than good.

3. Three hearts. The most you can do here is raise to three hearts, which indicates a strong hand and requests partner to go on to four with only a few scattered values. This hand is far more promising than the first one, though the high-card point count is the same. There are many fewer losers in this case.

4. Four hearts. It is best to go all out with this one, even though East-West may have the A-K of hearts and two side aces. It is much too risky to bid only three hearts, since partner might pass with some dreadful hand that contained only the king of hearts or one of the three missing aces.

Even if it turns out that partner has none of the four key cards and goes down one, the loss is apt to be more fancied than real, since East-West in such case could almost surely make at least three spades or four clubs.

Pentagon's Cut Sign Of Viet Withdrawals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's 100,000-plus cut in military manpower is likely to be viewed as a sign the Nixon administration is thinking big in the way of future troop withdrawals from Vietnam.

Alger County To Have Pioneer Picnic Aug. 31

Residents of the Alger County area are invited to a Pioneer Picnic sponsored by the Alger County Historical Society to be held at Camp Shaw, Chatham, Sunday, Aug. 31.

Strictly pot luck, reservations must be made by Aug. 26, specifying the food item. The picnic committee consists of Mrs. Doris Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Snerov, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Debelak and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Braamse.

Telephone chairmen for the various townships are Mrs. Braamse and Mrs. Snerov for Au Train and Onota; Alex Niemel for Burt; Debelak for Limestone; Mrs. Rodgers for Mathias; Ralph Samuelson for Rock and Mrs. Verna Gattiss and Mrs. Edwin Mitchell for Munising. Dinner will be at 1 o'clock. Persons are to provide their own table service. Coffee will be free of charge.

Races and contests and a baseball game are scheduled.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, announcing the cut Thursday, said the military reduction over the next 10 months doesn't necessarily imply a Vietnam cut of that scope.

But he specifically ruled out combat troop withdrawals from West Germany, South Korea and Okinawa—leaving Vietnam as one of the few remaining places where large numbers of Americans are stationed.

Pentagon officials admit privately that Laird considers potential replacement of U.S. troops by South Vietnamese a factor in his plans to trim the over-all American military force level.

Furthermore, President Nixon said in June he hoped to be able to more than match a suggestion by former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford to get 100,000 combat troops out of Vietnam this year.

Some military officers believe the next withdrawal announced by the President will probably amount to no more than 25,000 men. Further pullouts could take place over coming months.

The "more than 100,000" man reduction comes as part of a congressionally directed Pentagon effort to slash defense spending by another $3 billion for the current fiscal year.

Laird already lopped $1.1 billion from the original fiscal 1970 budget inherited in January from the outgoing administration.

College Students, Teachers To Tour City Saturday

A group of about 30 students and teachers of Central Michigan University will be in Escanaba on Saturday on their "off-campus education" tour of the state — part of a Michigan history, travel-study course.

Among places of interest they will visit is the Delta County Historical Museum in Ludington Park, where they will be greeted by Charles Folio, past president and a director of the local Historical Society.

The group is directed by their instructor, Floyd Dain, Mt. Pleasant, of the Central Michigan University faculty.

Gladstone OK's Panel's Order

In a hearing held Thursday at the Civic Center in Escanaba, the City of Gladstone told the State Water Resources Commission that it would comply with a Commission order entry provided a new clause was added leaving the city an "out" if finances were not available.

The Commission agreed to the special clause, allowing Gladstone a possible extension if they showed some progress in the near future.

According to Michigan water quality standards, cities that dump waste into interstate waters, such as Lake Michigan, must have secondary treatment and phosphorus removal plants by June of 1972. Gladstone currently has only a primary removal system.

Under the Commission directive, Gladstone has been asked to submit an engineering study and design for a secondary treatment plant by March of 1970 in order to comply with the stipulation that they show some progress in pollution abatement.

School To Open At Bark River-Harris Sept. 2

The Bark River-Harris Schools will start the 1969-70 school year Sept. 2. Teachers will report at 8:30 a. m., and students at 1:15 p. m. Buses will pick up the children. Bus schedules will be the same as last year.

New students in the area are asked to register at the elementary building as soon as possible. Kindergarten students not yet registered are asked to do so as soon as possible also. All kindergarten students must have immunization shots before they can be enrolled. Kindergarten students will not start until Sept. 3.

Lunch tickets are the same price as last year — $3.50 for grades 1-8, and $4 for grades 9-12. Special milk will again be provided for those who want it in the elementary grades.

Book fees will be announced later.

New teachers in the system are Jean Wicklund, first grade; Margaret Knudson, junior high English; Marvin Kananen, fifth grade; John Butryniewicz, high school basketball; and Jack Wicklund, elementary building principal, said Gerald G. Rittenburgh, superintendent of schools.

Phelan, Erickson Named To State Legion Positions

Lloyd Phelan, 1826 9th Ave. S., has been appointed a member of the State American Legion Wolverine Boys' State committee; and Hubert A. Erickson, 1123 N. 16th, Escanaba, has been appointed a member of the state finance-auditing committee of the American Legion, Department of Michigan.

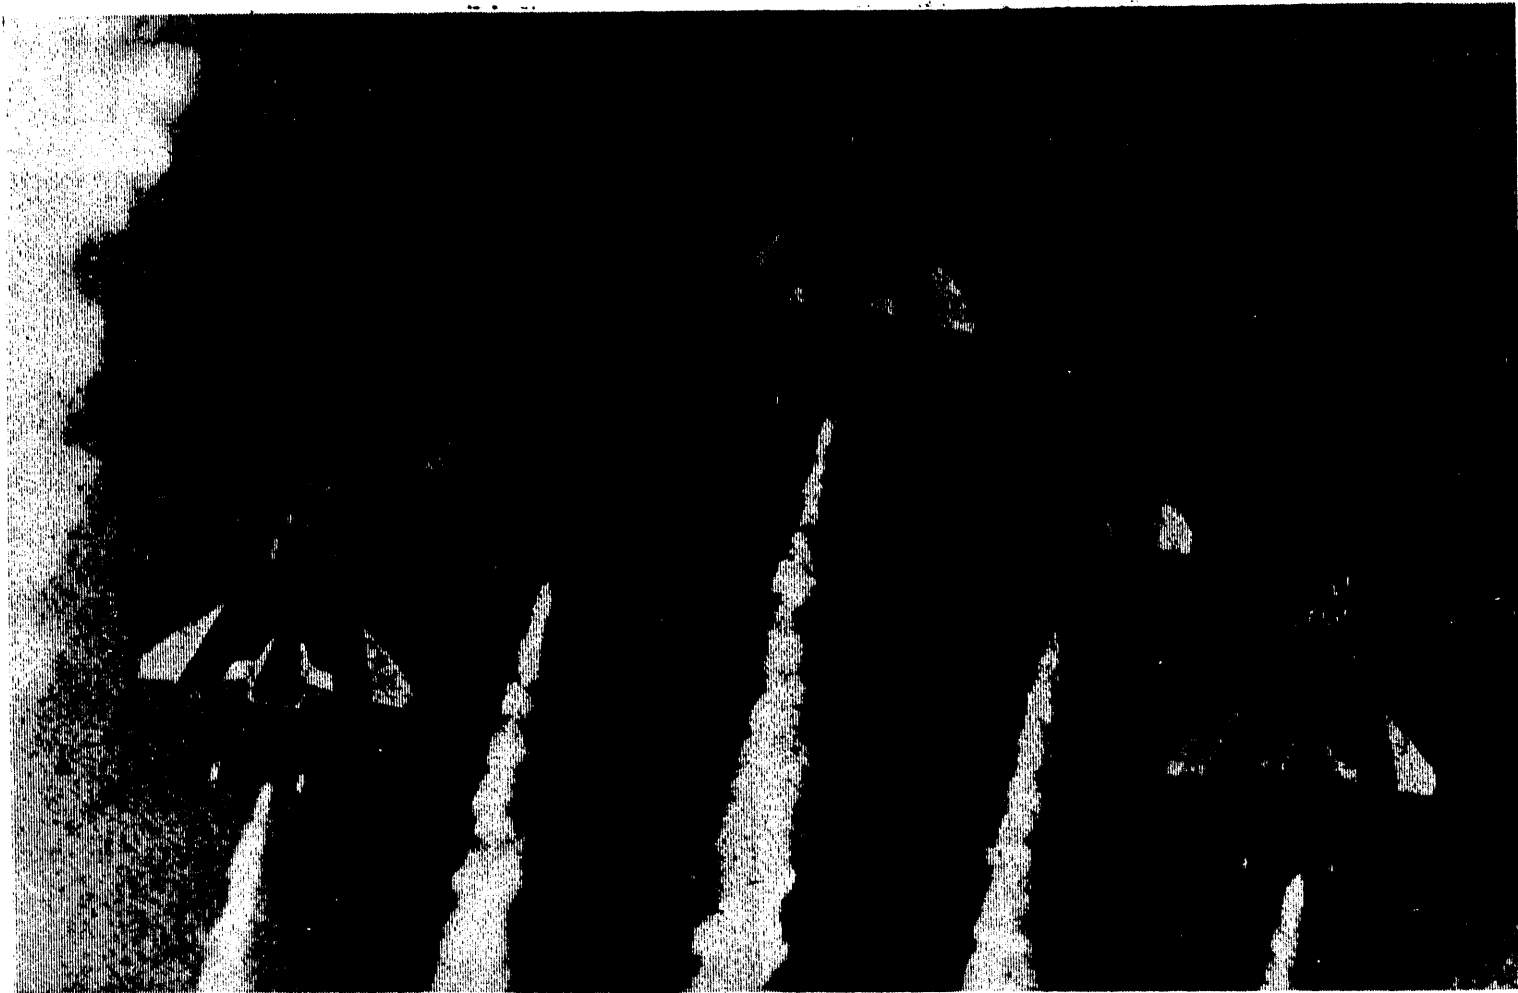

They were notified of appointment in a letter from State Commander F. Gerrit Veldman of Muskegon and were approved by the Legion's State Executive Committee at a meeting Saturday, Aug. 16, in Detroit.

They were nominated by Commander Veldman for the appointment upon the recommendation of Department of Michigan officials in recognition of the service they have rendered to the Post, District and the Department of Michigan.

District Court

Gary P. Juhl, 18, Willow Creek Rd., Escanaba, and David Ansell, 17, Rte. 1, Cornell, both pleaded guilty recently to a charge of being minors in possession not to a charge of breaking and entering as was previously reported.

The youths will be arraigned in Circuit Court for the breaking and entering charge. The fine reported was for minors in possession.

SPECTACULAR AIR SHOW, the U. S. Air Force Thunderbirds, will be presented at Escanaba at the dedication of the improved City Airport on Aug. 30. The precision flying of the team is considered the most thrilling air show in the world and is expected to attract thousands from the Upper Peninsula.

Aviation Days Set For Big Air Show

Directing attention to the forthcoming dedication of the Escanaba City Airport on Aug. 29-30, the Council adopted proclamations citing Wally Arntzen, Escanaba architect and aviator, for his contributions to the development of aviation, and named Aug. 29-30 as Aviation Days.

Escanaba's celebration will be highlighted by the appearance of the U. S. Air Force Thunderbirds in a spectacular aerial demonstration at 1:30 p. m. Aug. 30, over the beach of Ludington Park.

Mayor Cecil B. Chase in the proclamation extended "a sincere and cordial invitation to all citizens of Escanaba and the area to join the gala festivities as jets fill the sky during Escanaba's airport dedication program."

Regulations for the operation of the new Escanaba City Airport, reviewed by the City Council Thursday night, received praise from representatives of the Michigan Aeronautics Commission as "one of the best in the state."

"These are excellent rules and regulations that will do a terrific job for you in the future," Frank L. Sicklesmith, coordinator, airport services, Lansing, told the Council.

There will be a public hearing and adoption of the regulations at a Council meeting to be held Thursday night, Sept. 4.

With Sicklesmith at the Council session and joining in the discussion of the rules and regulations were John W.

Councilman Miles Dupule directed the Council's attention to a continuing problem of dust control at the Chicago & North Western ore loading dock. "Just as a reminder," he said.

City Manager Harvey noted that he has had calls on the situation, and that the North Western is working toward a solution of the problem.

In other business the Council authorized the city manager to advertise for sale 15 acres of land near the west city limits and south of Highway U. S. 2-41. A survey and title search, setting of a sale price figure, and the approval of the Planning Commission are necessary before the city-owned parcel is put up for sale, the city manager explained.

The Council gave final approval to the Art DeGrand residential development plat, as recommended by the Planning Commission; approved purchasing annual requirements for premium gasoline from the Standard Oil Co. at 14.04 cents per gallon.

Dr. Walfred Nelson, pastor of Bethany Lutheran Church, gave the invocation at opening of the Council session, and the pledge of allegiance was given by Glenn Tollefson, Boy Scout Troop No. 408.

Robert Mosenfelder, chairman of Rotary's international service committee, presented Sparenberg to the Council as an "ambassador of good will."

Sparenberg said in part: "It is necessary to bring international understanding down out of the clouds where people can do something about it."

Year Ago Gates Closed On C&H

CALUMET (AP)—Taken picket lines still maintain their vigil outside the locked gates of the old Calumet and Hecla Mining Co., which closed one year ago Thursday.

Mining stopped in Michigan's fabled Copper Country on Aug. 21, 1968, when the 1,000 members of the United Steelworkers walked out of the mines, mills and smelters operated by the Calumet Division of the Universal Oil Products Co.

The company finally said it would close the mines permanently. Only a token force is still on the job.

About 400 striking workers have left the area. Some have gone to the White Pine Copper Co. in Ontonagon County or to the iron mines in Marquette County. Others have moved to Detroit and Milwaukee to find factory jobs.

The Calumet area's stricken economy has been buoyed somewhat by heavy tourist travel this summer, but the real pinch is expected to come when the travelers go home this fall.

Coal which the mining company had stored to operate its furnaces is being sold to ships as fuel and thousands of tons of scrap copper have been shipped elsewhere for smelting.

Residents Couldn't Imagine Camille

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — Why didn't the residents leave before Hurricane Camille unleashed its fury on the Mississippi Gulf Coast?

"I guess the people just didn't realize the magnitude of the storm," Nap Cassibary, area Civil Defense coordinator, said today.

"I know I didn't realize just how bad it could be. I've lived here all my life, 51 years and I just couldn't conceive of 190 mile an hour winds."

"A 20-foot tide rise is just inconceivable and I think that's why there were so many people trapped by the storm. Hell, we've had hurricanes—and bad ones, so we thought—in the past."

Killed In Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — One Michigan man was among the 24 servicemen listed Thursday by the Defense Department as killed in action in Vietnam. He was Navy Hospital Corpsman 3 C. Robert C. Beckman of LaPeer.

Pentagon's Cut Sign Of Viet Withdrawals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's 100,000-plus cut in military manpower is likely to be viewed as a sign the Nixon administration is thinking big in the way of future troop withdrawals from Vietnam.

Alger County To Have Pioneer Picnic Aug. 31

Residents of the Alger County area are invited to a Pioneer Picnic sponsored by the Alger County Historical Society to be held at Camp Shaw, Chatham, Sunday, Aug. 31.

Strictly pot luck, reservations must be made by Aug. 26, specifying the food item. The picnic committee consists of Mrs. Doris Rodgers, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Sinervo, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Debelak and Mr. and Mrs. Byron Braamse.

Telephone chairmen for the various townships are Mrs. Braamse and Mrs. Sinervo for Au Train and Onota; Alex Niemi for Burt; Debelak for Limestone; Mrs. Rodgers for Mathias; Ralph Samuelson for Rock, and Mrs. Verna Gatiss and Mrs. Edwin Mitchell for Munising. Dinner will be at 1 o'clock. Persons are to provide their own table service. Coffee will be free of charge.

Races and contests and a baseball game are scheduled.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, announcing the cut Thursday, said the military reduction over the next 10 months doesn't necessarily imply a Vietnam cut of that scope.

But he specifically ruled out combat troop withdrawals from West Germany, South Korea and Okinawa—leaving Vietnam as one of the few remaining places where large numbers of Americans are stationed.

Pentagon officials admit privately that Laird considers potential replacement of U.S. troops by South Vietnamese a factor in his plans to trim the over-all American military force level.

Furthermore, President Nixon said in June he hoped to be able to more than match a suggestion by former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford to get 100,000 combat troops out of Vietnam this year.

Some military officers believe the next withdrawal announced by the President will probably amount to no more than 25,000 men. Further pullouts could take place over coming months.

The "more than 100,000" man reduction comes as part of a congressionally directed Pentagon effort to slash defense spending by another $3 billion for the current fiscal year.

Laird already lopped $1.1 billion from the original fiscal 1970 budget inherited in January from the outgoing administration.

College Students, Teachers To Tour City Saturday

A group of about 30 students and teachers of Central Michigan University will be in Escanaba on Saturday on their "off-campus education" tour of the state — part of a Michigan history, travel-study course.

Among places of interest they will visit is the Delta County Historical Museum in Ludington Park, where they will be greeted by Charles Folio, past president and a director of the local Historical Society.

The group is directed by their instructor, Floyd Dain, Mt. Pleasant, of the Central Michigan University faculty.

Gladstone OK's Panel's Order

In a hearing held Thursday at the Civic Center in Escanaba, the City of Gladstone told the State Water Resources Commission that it would comply with a Commission order entry provided a new clause was added leaving the city an "out" if finances were not available.

The Commission agreed to the special clause, allowing Gladstone a possible extension if they showed some progress in the near future.

According to Michigan water quality standards, cities that dump waste into interstate waters, such as Lake Michigan, must have secondary treatment and phosphorus removal plants by June of 1972. Gladstone currently has only a primary removal system.

Under the Commission directive, Gladstone has been asked to submit an engineering study and design for a secondary treatment plant by March of 1970 in order to comply with the stipulation that they show some progress in pollution abatement.

School To Open At Bark River-Harris Sept. 2

The Bark River-Harris Schools will start the 1969-70 school year Sept. 2. Teachers will report at 8:30 a. m., and students at 1:15 p. m. Buses will pick up the children. Bus schedules will be the same as last year.

All kindergarten students must have immunization shots before they can be enrolled. Kindergarten students will not start until Sept. 3.

Lunch tickets are the same price as last year — $3.50 for grades 1-8, and $4 for grades 9-12. Special milk will again be provided for those who want it in the elementary grades. Book fees will be announced later.

New teachers in the system are Jean Wicklund, first grade; Margaret Knudson, junior high English; Marvin Kananen, fifth grade; John Butrymowicz, high school and basketball; and Jack Wicklund, elementary building principal, said Gerald G. Ritenburgh, superintendent of schools.

SPECTACULAR AIR SHOW, the U. S. Air Force Thunderbirds, will be presented at Escanaba at the dedication of the improved City Airport on Aug. 30. The precision flying of the team is considered the most thrilling air show in the world and is expected to attract thousands from the Upper Peninsula.

Aviation Days Set For Big Air Show

Directing attention to the forthcoming dedication of the Escanaba City Airport on Aug. 29-30, the Council adopted proclamations citing Wally Arntzen, Escanaba architect and aviator, for his contributions to the development of aviation, and named Aug. 29-30 as Aviation Days.

Escanaba's celebration will be highlighted by the appearance of the U. S. Air Force Thunderbirds in a spectacular aerial demonstration at 1:30 p. m. Aug. 30, over the beach of Ludington Park.

Mayor Cecil B. Chase in the proclamation extended "a sincere and cordial invitation to all citizens of Escanaba and the area to join the gala festivities as jets fill the sky during Escanaba's airport dedication program."

Regulations for the operation of the new Escanaba City Airport, reviewed by the City Council Thursday night, received praise from representatives of the Michigan Aeronautics Commission as "one of the best in the state."

"These are excellent rules and regulations that will do a terrific job for you in the future," Frank L. Sicklesmith, coordinator, airport services, Lansing, told the Council.

There will be a public hearing and adoption of the regulations at a Council meeting to be held Thursday night, Sept. 4.

With Sicklesmith at the Council session and joining in the discussion of the rules and regulations were John W.

Councilman Miles Dupuie directed the Council's attention to a continuing problem of dust control at the Chicago & North Western ore loading dock. "Just as a reminder," he said.

City Manager Harvey noted that he has had calls on the situation, and that the North Western is working toward a solution of the problem.

In other business the Council authorized the city manager to advertise for sale 15 acres of land near the west city limits and south of Highway U. S. 2-41. The 14th hole was even but at the end of the 15th hole, Miss Voinse was down 3 and 3 to go. She took the 16th hole but Mrs. LeBrasseur clinched the match on the 17th hole.

Milliken Vetos Retirement Bill

LANSING (AP) — Gov. William Milliken has "regretfully" vetoed a bill dealing with the legislative retirement allowance, saying it would "afford special treatment to one group of public servants."

The measure was the 13th Milliken has turned down thus far this year.

"The bill, as originally introduced in the Senate, was designed to resolve problems in connection with benefits to widows of deceased members," Milliken said in his veto message.

"Essentially the bill was meritorious in its purpose and constructively resolved current difficulties in the legislative retirement system regarding survivors' allowances."

Milliken noted, however, that the purpose was "substantially changed by amendments when the bill was considered in the House."

"Without providing for any commensurate increase in legislative contribution to the system," he said, the bill "would reduce the minimum term of service from eight to six years and would lower the minimum retirement age from 60 to 55."

"I know of no retirement system which provides for such a minimum length of service and attained age prior to full participation in benefits," the governor added.

These additional benefits, Milliken said, "far exceed the benefits which are available to other employees, public and private, even under the most liberal industry programs."

"At a time when the state is having difficulty financing the current cost of its state employee and teacher pension programs, it would be most unwise to establish a precedent for a short-term eligible service and lower retirement age," he said.

"Unquestionably," he said, "the members of the Legislature are laboring with diligence. Moreover, your labor is one of great public service in many cases at great personal sacrifice—for which no adequate compensation can be made to you and your families."

"My veto," he contended, "should in no way be construed as an attempt to demean or debase that service or that sacrifice."

Opening Day At 120th State Fair

DETROIT (AP) — The 120th annual Michigan State Fair—billed as the oldest in the nation—opened today with entertainment ranging from a Dixieland band to a sewing seminar.

Floors, clowns and 100 marching bands will parade down Detroit's main drag, Woodward Avenue, in a nighttime feature of the opening day's festivities.

The fair is booked for an 11-day run at the Michigan State Fairgrounds at Woodward and Eight Mile.

It includes the whole gamut of shows, from Dixieland trumpet or Al Hirt to a sunrise religious service Sunday morning. In between are a high-class horse show, special veterans programs and a horseshoe pitching tournament.

J. L. Hudson will feature a fashion show and sewing seminar throughout the fair at the Community Arts Auditorium.

Other companies contributing to the fair are Michigan Bell Telephone, with a program on "Apollo-The Eighth Wonder of the World"; Consumers Power Co., with Cues for Barbecueing; and Montgomery Ward's fashion show at the Teen Scene Stage.

Music, and lots of it, also will mark the show.

Besides Al Hirt, there will be numerous Battles of the Bands, throwing top local rock bands into direct competition; Noble Wilson and his Jamaican Band; John Kopley and his Good Old Summertime Orchestra; the Nashville-Hawaiian Country Music All Star Revue; the Briarwoods and Maria Jackson; and many state high school bands.

That's not all. Besides music the fair will have Patti O'Dae's Theatrical Studio; the Laur Dancing and Singing Society; the Jean Nuccelli Concert Ballet; the P.R.C.U. North Detroit Dancing School; and the Polish American Folk Theatre.

Suspect Arson In Covert Fire

COVERT (AP) — The state fire marshal's office is investigating the possibility of arson in a fire which leveled two buildings belonging to the Covert Lumber and Supply Co. and a nearby hardware storage building.

The fire in this tiny Van Buren County community was reported about 10 p. m. Wednesday and raged out of control about four hours.

Damages were estimated at $50,000, officials said.

Eugene Coker of South Haven, owner of the lumber firm, said he found a burned auto seat beside one of his buildings earlier Wednesday.

Roger's Round Table Defends Wage Hikes

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger's Round Table has been called to order, its mission being to defend the nation against big wage increases in the construction industry, thus holding the line on inflation and preserving free enterprise.

The round table takes its name from its founder, former U.S. Steel Chairman Roger Blough. It is a nickname really, for this alliance of large corporations is called officially the Construction Users Anti-Inflation Round Table.

Aside from wondering why Blough chose this particular method of fighting inflation, one cannot help but wonder if such a scheme might not really be antagonistic to free enterprise.

Wages have been rising sharply in the construction industry, and without a doubt they are inflating the cost of structures contracted for by the big companies that Blough seeks to organize in a resistance move.

Steel Prices

But steel prices have been rising too, and steel is one of the most basic ingredients not only of structures but of almost every automobile and every household appliance you can name.

As recently as July 30 U.S. Steel initiated an increase in the price of steel used in refrigerators and cars, incurring the anger of none other than General Motors, which itself was com-cerned about the prices of its 1970 models.

Something like 80 per cent of steel industry products have higher price tags now than at the beginning of the year. In fact, the recent history of the steel industry has been one battle after another with government over price increases.

Its latest clash was last August with President Lyndon B. Johnson, when Bethlehem Steel announced increases of more than 4 per cent, later cut back under federal pressure and criticism to about 2.5 per cent.

Shortly before the increase was cut, the Wall Street Journal quoted a high administration official as saying it could be "the single biggest, most inflationary event in more than a decade."

The unnamed official added that it was "incredible" that an industry should attempt to raise prices as much as intended while at the same time seeking quotas to protect itself from imported steel.

"It seems," he said, that "the American consumer is the one who needs protection" from the American steel industry.

Technology

The industry has usually blamed wage increases for forcing price increases. And it has argued as strongly that it was unfair to expect American steel producers to compete with imports from nations where labor costs are lower.

A lot of economists and others don't accept the argument completely. Instead, they blame poor management, even backwardness.

One of the most outspoken criticism was published in the May 1966 issue of the Quarterly Journal of Economics by W. Adams and J. B. Dirlam, both university professors. It was entitled "Big Steel, Invention and Innovation."

The authors claimed that U.S. steelmakers lagged behind the world in adopting new technology, that large U.S. firms lagged behind small ones, that the domestic industry added 40 million tons of "wrong" capacity in the 1950s.

If a new technology, the basic oxygen process, had been substituted earlier than it had been for open hearths, the authors said, the industry would have realized big savings in capital investments and operating costs.

The industry contests the findings and it could be right. But the mere criticism in a scholarly journal indicates that some well informed people think steelmen can fight inflation a lot closer to home.

The question that has disturbed economists and government officials for a long time is how much blame for low profits should be assessed against steel management and how much should be blamed on other factors.

Kate LeBrasseur Retains Ladies' Golfing Crown

Kate LeBrasseur retained the women's golf championship title of the Indian Lake Golf and Country Club with a 3-1 victory over challenger Helen Jean Voisine Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. LeBrasseur chalked up her 13th club championship by winning the coveted trophy. She first won the trophy in 1953, regained it again in 1957 and held it through 1966 when she was upset by Miss Voisine. However, she won again in 1967 and has held it since then. She sailed from a field of 16 competitors in championship play to win this year.

Mrs. LeBrasseur is one of two women golfers — the other Mrs. N. H. Modders — to make a hole-in-one on the Indian Lake golf course.

During the first nine holes of tournament play the LeBrasseur-Voisine match was even. On the second nine holes the match continued even until Mrs. LeBrasseur took the 12th and 13th hole. The 14th hole was even but at the end of the 15th hole, Miss Voisine was down 3 and 3 to go. She took the 16th hole but Mrs. LeBrasseur clinched the match on the 17th hole.

In other tournament play, Olive Smits defeated Gilda Davidson to become Consolation Championship Flight winner; Millie Johnson is First Flight Consolation winner and Babe Carpenter, runner-up; Miriam Orhanen, second flight consolation winner and Ruby Reed, runner-up.

Activity Day Set For Sunday

An Activity Day is planned for Sunday at the Indian Lake Golf and Country Club with mixed foursomes to tee off at 1:30 p.m. Golfers interested in participating must sign up by noon Saturday with the club steward.

A supper is planned following golf play with a $1.00 charge for food. Those attending the supper are asked to bring meat to charcoal and their own table service.

A nominating committee was appointed during the Wednesday ladies division supper-meeting. Mrs. Walter Rich, Mrs. N. H. Modders and Mrs. A. W. Cockram will present a slate to the membership.

Guests at the supper meeting included Cheryl Beach and Janie Thompson of Livonia and Cindy Dailey of East Lansing. Bridge was played following the meeting with prizes going to Mrs. John Kelly, Mrs. Tom Hoholik, Mrs. Lyle Wilson and Mrs. Andrew Brown.

Hostesses for Aug. 27 will be Mrs. Ty Orhanen, Mrs. Harold Mickelson, Mrs. John Ott and Mrs. Edwin Thompson. Reservations or cancellations may be made by Tuesday noon with the club steward.

Women's golf pairings for Aug. 27 find the Putters playing the Sandtrappers and the Tee Offs playing the Fairways. Golfers will arrange their own matches and are asked to choose a member of the opposing team with whom they have not played.

Golf tournament prizes will also be awarded at the Aug. 27 meeting.

FBI charges against Sams included unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for murder, kidnapping and conspiracy.

STATE TROOPERS said they had stopped this truck and given the driver a ticket for being overloaded by 31,000 pounds. The driver took the big vehicle a few miles down the road, then stopped to move the adjustable wheels further back. Milliken Vetos Retirement Bill

LANSING (AP) — Gov. William Milliken has "regretfully" vetoed a bill dealing with the legislative retirement allowance, saying it would "afford special treatment to one group of public servants."

The measure was the 13th Milliken has turned down thus far this year.

"The bill, as originally introduced in the Senate, was designed to resolve problems in connection with benefits to widows of deceased members," Milliken said in his veto message.

"Essentially the bill was meritorious in its purpose and constructively resolved current difficulties in the legislative retirement system regarding survivors' allowances."

Milliken noted, however, that the purpose was "substantially changed by amendments when the bill was considered in the House."

"Without providing for any commensurate increase in legislative contribution to the system," he said, the bill "would reduce the minimum term of service from eight to six years and would lower the minimum retirement age from 60 to 55."

"I know of no retirement system which provides for such a minimum length of service and attained age prior to full participation in benefits," the governor added.

These additional benefits, Milliken said, "far exceed the benefits which are available to other employees, public and private, even under the most liberal industry programs."

"At a time when the state is having difficulty financing the current cost of its state employee and teacher pension programs, it would be most unwise to establish a precedent for a shortened eligible service and lower retirement age," he said.

"Unquestionably," he said, "the members of the Legislature are laboring with diligence. Moreover, your labor is one of great public service—in many cases at great personal sacrifice—for which no adequate compensation can be made to you and your families."

"My veto," he contended, "should in no way be construed as an attempt to demean or debase that service or that sacrifice."

Opening Day At 120th State Fair

DETROIT (AP) — The 120th annual Michigan State Fair—billed as the oldest in the nation—opened today with entertainment ranging from a Dixieland band to a sewing seminar. Floats, clowns and 100 marching bands will parade down Detroit's main drag, Woodward Avenue, in a nighttime feature of the opening day's festivities.

The fair is booked for an 11-day run at the Michigan State Fairgrounds at Woodward and Eight Mile.

It includes the whole gamut of shows, from Dixieland trumpet Al Hirt to a stunner religious service Sunday morning. In between are a high-class horse show, special veterans programs and a horseshoe pitching tournament.

J. L. Hudson will feature a fashion show and sewing seminar throughout the fair at the Community Arts Auditorium.

Other companies contributing to the fair are Michigan Bell Telephone, with a program on "Apollo-The Eighth Wonder of the World"; Consumers Power Co., with Cues for Barbecueing; and Montgomery Ward's fashion show at the Teen Scene Stage.

Music, and lots of it, also will mark the show.

Besides Al Hirt, there will be numerous Battles of the Bands, throwing top local rock bands into direct competition; Noble Wilson and his Jamaican Band; John Keypley and his Good Old Summertime Orchestra; the Nashville-Hawaiian Country Music All Star Revue; the Briarwoods and Marla Jackson; and many state high school bands.

That's not all. Besides music the fair will have Patti O'Dae's Theatrical Studio; the Laur Dancing and Singing Society; the Jean Nuccilli Concert Ballet; the P.R.C.U. North Detroit Dancing School; and the Polish American Folk Theatre.

Suspect Arson In Covert Fire

COVERT (AP) — The state fire marshal's office is investigating the possibility of arson in a fire which leveled two buildings belonging to the Covert Lumber and Supply Co. and a nearby hardware storage building.

The fire in this tiny Van Buren County community was reported about 10 p.m. Wednesday and raged out of control about four hours.

Damages were estimated at $50,000, officials said.

Eugene Coker of South Haven, owner of the lumber firm, said he found a burned auto seat beside one of his buildings earlier Wednesday.

Roger's Round Table Defends Wage Hikes

NEW YORK (AP) — Roger's Round Table has been called to order, its mission being to defend the nation against big wage increases in the construction industry, thus holding the line on inflation and preserving free enterprise.

The round table takes its name from its founder, former U.S. Steel Chairman Roger Blough. It is a nickname really, for this alliance of large corporations is called officially the Construction Users Anti-Inflation Round Table.

Aside from wondering why Blough chose this particular method of fighting inflation, one cannot help but wonder if such a scheme might not really be antagonistic to free enterprise.

Wages have been rising sharply in the construction industry, and without a doubt they are inflating the cost of structures contracted for by the big companies that Blough seeks to organize in a resistance move.

But steel prices have been rising too, and steel is one of the most basic ingredients not only of structures but of almost every automobile and every household appliance you can name.

As recently as July 30 U.S. Steel initiated an increase in the price of steel used in refrigerators and cars, incurring the anger of none other than General Motors, which itself was concerned about the prices of its 1970 models.

Something like 80 per cent of steel industry products have higher price tags now than at the beginning of the year. In fact, the recent history of the steel industry has been one battle after another with government over price increases.

Its latest clash was last August with President Lyndon B. Johnson, when Bethlehem Steel announced increases of more than 4 per cent, later cut back under federal pressure and criticism to about 2.5 per cent.

Shortly before the increase was cut, the Wall Street Journal quoted a high administration official as saying it could be "the single biggest, most inflationary event in more than a decade."

The unnamed official added that it was "incredible" that an industry should attempt to raise prices as much as intended while at the same time seeking quotas to protect itself from imported steel.

"It seems," he said, "that the American consumer is the one who needs protection" from the American steel industry.

The industry contests the findings and it could be right. But the mere criticism in a scholarly journal indicates that some well informed people think steelmen can fight inflation a lot closer to home.

The question that has disturbed economists and government officials for a long time is how much blame for low profits should be assessed against steel management and how much should be blamed on other factors.

Rotary Vs. Reel

Q — I'm shopping for a power lawn mower. Can you tell me whether it is better to get a rotary mower or a reel mower?

A — About 10 rotary mowers are sold for each reel mower. The rotary is highly effective for cutting both fine and coarse grasses, does a good job of cutting tall grass and weeds, requires less blade maintenance and can be used on rough ground. Reel mowers can be set to make a very low cut, are good on steep slopes and terraced lawns and are generally safer than the rotary because they do not have flat blades turning at a high velocity. When reel blades are damaged, they are more difficult to repair. Also, while good on slopes, they are not as effective as rotaries on rough ground.

Shingle Weight

Q — I'm having a roof re-done. The contractor says he's going to use a number 235 asphalt shingle. Can you tell me what that means?

A — A number 25 shingle refers to its approximate weight, in this case 235 pounds per 100 square feet of roof area. It is the standard shingle designed to last at least 15 years. You can get heavyweight shingles which last 25 years or longer, but your contractor will have to decide whether they can be used on your particular house. You might consider the use of a self-sealing shingle, similar in appearance to the standard type, but provided with adhesive seals which bond the edges to the shingle below, thus furnishing strong resistance to heavy winds.

Caulking

Q — I have some caulking to do around the sides of the house. Can I use the same black caulking compound I used on the roof last year?

A — Probably not, since the chances are you will want to paint the compound after it has been applied. Black caulking compound usually has an asphalt base. If painted, it eventually will bleed through the paint.

THREE-BEDROOM RANCH is basically rectangular, but the location of the garage produces an over-all L shape that permits proper placement of trellis-topped promenade, eye-catching feature leading to the front door.

Unusual Ranch Entrance

By ANDY LANG

An unusual approach to the front entrance door is one of the distinguishing features of this rambling three-bedroom ranch.

Before you open the door to the front foyer, you move along a welcoming promenade flanked on one side by brick columns and planters, and on the other by a brick wall. All of this is

S-7 STATISTICS

Design S-7 has a living-room, dining room, family room, kitchen-dinette, three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a large foyer with a total habitable area of 1868 square feet. There is a covered porch off the dinette, a laundry in the bedroom wing and a private terrace off the master bedroom. Over-all dimensions, which include the two-car garage, are 54' 10" by 59'. The plans include a partial basement.

capped by an attractive beamed trellis, with decorative wrought iron gates at the start of the walkway. This is a sort of "getting acquainted" element before entering the house.

Once inside, the feeling of light persists through clear story windows, expressed on the exterior by a notched-out portion of the roof. Thus, architect Samuel Paul has created an impression of continuity from the outside in.

Another highlight of Design S-7, although not as dramatic as the promenade entrance walk, is the location of the laundry, which is in the bedroom wing of the house. Homemaking research has indicated that many women feel that the laundry should be near the bedrooms, since it is from this area that the greatest bulk of the laundry comes. Here, the laundry center, while in the bedroom wing, is completely separated from the circulation of the rooms, which have their own private hall.

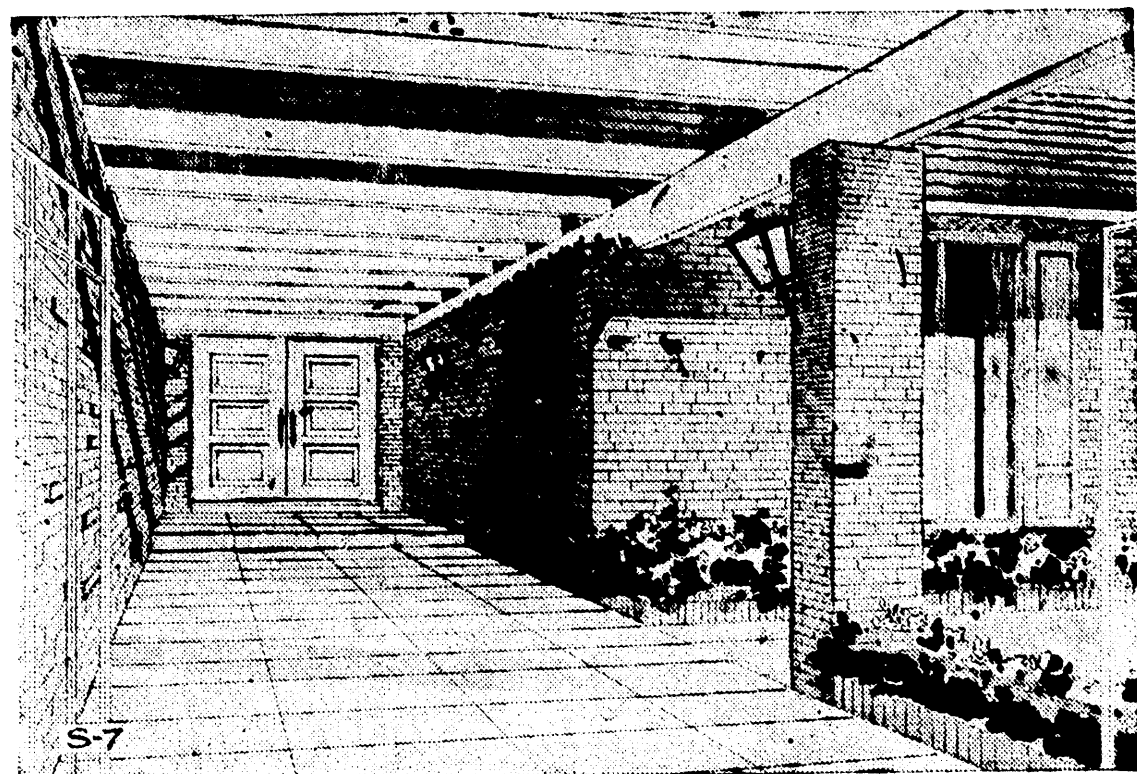

The living room is at the rear of the house and is entered from one end of the entrance foyer. It has a wall of glass with an access door to a patio that extends across the dining room as well. Sliding glass doors lead from the dining room to the patio.

Conveniently located just to the left of the entrance foyer and just to the right of a side entrance is the kitchen, with an abundance of wall-to-floor cabinets. Part of the kitchen, yet separated from it by an island in which the sink and dishwasher are located, is a sizable dinette. And off that is a covered porch which does double duty as a service entry and as a place for children to play in inclement weather.

A family room adjacent to the dinette and kitchen is equipped with a fireplace, on either side of which are large glass panels. There is direct access to the covered side porch, to the kitchen and to the two-car garage, as well as a stairway to the partial basement.

The master bedroom features a large private terrace reached by means of a sliding glass door. Its private bath has a built-in tub, shower, vanity and concealed water closet. The main hall bath has a vanity with two basins, a tub, shower and water closet.

Brick and vertical siding are combined on the exterior, with the planter on one side of the promenade and the planter along the front of the house adding the right touch of charm.

Hardboard Takes Standard Tools

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Because hardboard, especially the tempered kind, is so tough, there is a tendency among non-users to believe that it takes some special kind of skill to handle it.

Actually, it can be cut and worked with ordinary carpenter tools using standard woodworking methods. Which isn't too surprising, since it is made from logs that have been converted to chips, then to wood fibers, bonded together under heat and pressure.

All materials can be cut, drilled and fastened much more easily by observing certain fundamentals. This applies to wood, metal, plastic or anything else, including hardboard. Here are some tips that will enable you to get the best results when using hardboard in a project:

1—When cutting straight edges with a cross-cut hand-saw, use one with 8 to 12 teeth per inch. When using a circular power saw, a cross-cut or combination blade will handle most jobs, but if extensive cutting is to be done, a carbide tip blade is best.

2—Hardboard can be drilled with both hand and power tools, using standard bits. Work into the finished side of the panel and support the work with a block of wood or other soft material.

3—For interior nailing, 8d finish nails, galvanized, are preferred. Annular-thread or ring-groove hardboard nails also may be used. Nail the center of the panel first and work toward the edges. Nail at least 1/4 of an inch from the panel edges.

4—In using a screw or bolt, a hole should be drilled to accommodate the shank of the fastener. For attaching hinges and hardware, use sheet metal screws after pre-drilling holes slightly smaller than the screw diameter.

5—In fastening hardboard with an adhesive, use a tile-board or panel waterproof type. Adhesive intended only for acoustical tile lacks enough strength to support the hardboard.

6—When using staples, select those with narrow crowns and divergent points. The staples should be at least 1/2 inch longer than the thickness of the board. Recommended spacing is 4 to 6 inches.

7—Hardboard may be bent to shape. For large-radius bends, which are to be permanently supported by a frame, fasten one edge to the frame, then bend gradually, fastening to the frame as you go. Never start at the center of the bend. For tight-radius bends, wet or soak the hardboard first.

Rotary Vs. Reel

Q — I'm shopping for a power lawn mower. Can you tell me whether it is better to get a rotary mower or a reel mower?

A — About 10 rotary mowers are sold for each reel mower. The rotary is highly effective for cutting both fine and coarse grasses, does a good job of cutting tall grass and weeds, requires less blade maintenance and can be used on rough ground. Reel mowers can be set to make a very low cut, are good on steep slopes and terraced lawns and are generally safer than the rotary because they do not have flat blades turning at a high velocity. When reel blades are damaged, they are more difficult to repair. Also, while good on slopes, they are not as effective as rotary mowers on rough ground.

Shingle Weight

Q — I'm having a roof redone. The contractor says he's going to use a number 235 asphalt shingle. Can you tell me what that means?

A — A number 25 shingle refers to its approximate weight, in this case 235 pounds per 100 square feet of roof area. It is the standard shingle designed to last at least 15 years. You can get heavyweight shingles which last 25 years or longer, but your contractor will have to decide whether they can be used on your particular house. You might consider the use of a self-sealing shingle, similar in appearance to the standard type, but provided with adhesive seals which bond the edges to the shingle below, thus furnishing strong resistance to heavy winds.

Caulking

Q — I have some caulking to do around the sides of the house. Can I use the same black caulking compound I used on the roof last year?

A — Probably not, since the chances are you will want to paint the compound after it has been applied. Black caulking compound usually has an asphalt base. If painted, it eventually will bleed through the paint.

THREE-BEDROOM RANCH is basically rectangular, but the location of the garage produces an over-all L shape that permits proper placement of trellis-topped promenade, eye-catching feature leading to the front door.

Unusual Ranch Entrance

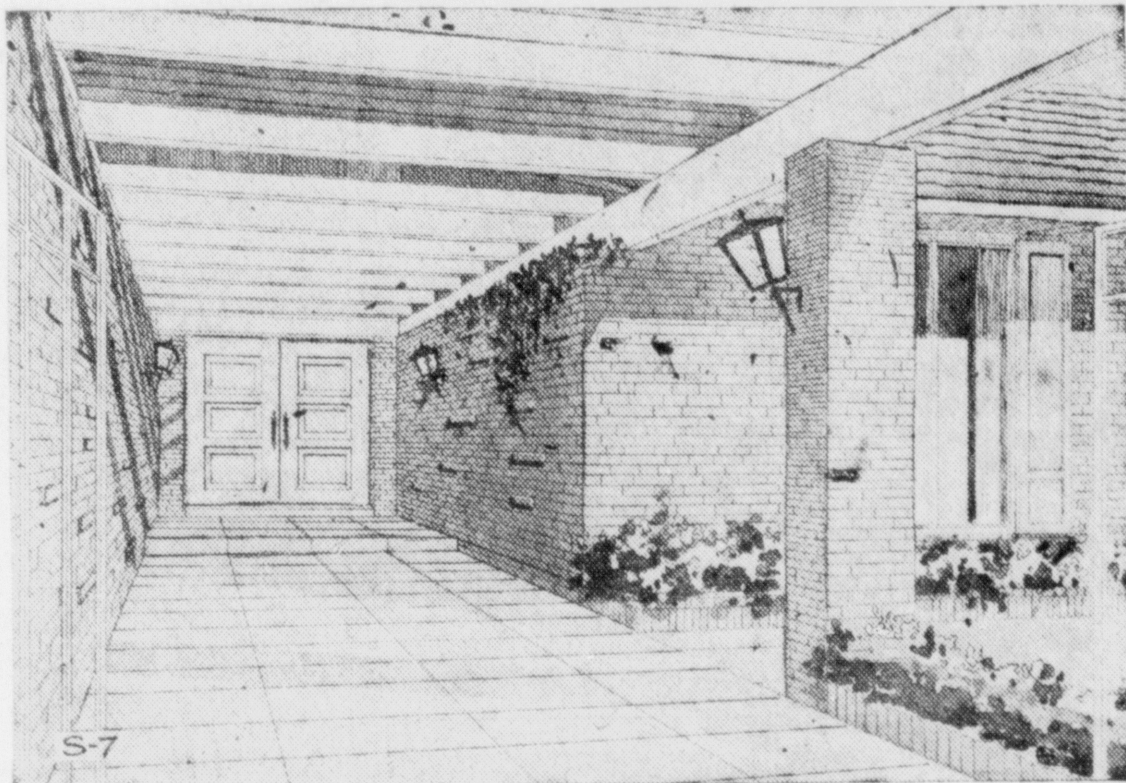

By ANDY LANG

An unusual approach to the front entrance door is one of the distinguishing features of this rambling three-bedroom ranch.

Before you open the door to the front foyer, you move along a welcoming promenade flanked on one side by brick columns and planters, and on the other by a brick wall. All of this is

S-7 STATISTICS

Design S-7 has a living-room, dining room, family room, kitchen-dinette, three bedrooms, two bathrooms and a large foyer with a total habitable area of 1868 square feet. There is a covered porch off the dinette, a laundry in the bedroom wing and a private terrace off the master bedroom. Over-all dimensions, which include the two-car garage, are 54' 10" by 59'. The plans include a partial basement.

CLOSE-UP of walkway gives good idea of how attractive this exterior design conception can be. Planters at side of walkway and front of house contribute to pleasing effect.

capped by an attractive beamed trellis, with decorative wrought iron gates at the start of the walkway. This is a sort of "getting acquainted" element before entering the house.

Once inside, the feeling of light persists through clear story windows, expressed on the exterior by a notched-out portion of the roof. Thus, architect Samuel Paul has created an impression of continuity from the outside in.

Another highlight of Design S-7, although not as dramatic as the promenade entrance walk, is geared for practicality. It's the location of the laundry, which is in the bedroom wing of the house. Homemaking research has indicated that many women feel that the laundry should be near the bedrooms, since it is from this area that the greatest bulk of the laundry comes. Here, the laundry center, while in the bedroom wing, is completely separated from the circulation of the rooms, which have their own private hall.

The living room is at the rear of the house and is entered from one end of the entrance foyer. It has a wall of glass with an access door to a patio that extends across the dining room as well. Sliding glass doors lead from the dining room to the patio.

Conveniently located just to the left of the entrance foyer and just to the right of a side entrance is the kitchen, with an abundance of wall-to-floor cabinets. Part of the kitchen, yet separated from it by an island in which the sink and dishwasher are located, is a sizable dinette. And off that is a covered porch which does double duty as a service entry and as a place for children to play in inclement weather.

A family room adjacent to the dinette and kitchen is equipped with a fireplace, on either side of which are large glass panels. There is direct access to the covered side porch, to the kitchen and to the two-car garage, as well as a stairway to the partial basement.

The master bedroom features a large private terrace reached by means of a sliding glass door. Its private bath has a built-in tub, shower, vanity and concealed water closet. The main hall bath has a vanity with two basins, a tub, shower and water closet.

Brick and vertical siding are combined on the exterior, with the planter on one side of the promenade and the planter along the front of the house adding the right touch of charm.

Hardboard Takes Standard Tools

By ANDY LANG

Because hardboard, especially the tempered kind, is so tough, there is a tendency among non-users to believe that it takes some special kind of skill to handle it.

Room Project Bridges The Generation Gap

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A do-it-yourselfer dad has a great chance to get together with his teen-agers—if he is interested in helping them refurbish their rooms, that is.

Young people today are interested in their surroundings, more so perhaps than any previous generation. They know what they want, and the only mistake parents make is to argue over some small thing—the color of a bookcase or the pattern of a wallpaper. Argue about something big—can he keep an elephant or a monkey in his room, but otherwise, let him make decisions about his personal domain.

Most young adults have great taste, and if dad has a good suggestion, they won't pass it up. They just object to an adamant parental attitude when they feel right about something.

There are many do-it-yourself projects—little shutters inside a window, screens, headboards, wall shelves, and even closets—that a home handyman might do.

An old headboard painted or papered in a lattice weave effect can change the look of a room. An iron garden gate fastened to the wall may provide a charming headboard for a studio bed.

One girl asked dad to fasten grandma's collection of fans to an old headboard that was painted black and tortoise-shelled with a gold-colored paint. He fastened the fans to the top section of the headboard for a delightful effect.

Another girl lattice-wove the wide heavy braid designed by Dorothy Liebes in the size to fit her bed. Dad fastened it to the back of the plain headboard. It could have been decoratively nailed to the front of the headboard leaving the headboard's border visible.

One young man decided on a great swirling abstract design on the wall behind his bed. If you go for such an idea, think "moon and rainbow" and it will be simple, his father suggests. He made a great big orange circle, and put swirls above it of light green, yellow and vivid pink in a rainbow design.

Manufacturers often suggest great ideas to stores for displays that will jazz up merchandise. If you are doing a studio room, visit stores and look at such displays.

For example, a magazine issued by a headboard maker a divided stores on carrying out some headboard ideas with basic materials.

There was a picket fence headboard that may be made by taking five slats of lathing about 4 in. and shaping the ends into pickets, and then nailing two pieces of wood across the slats. These may be painted in bright colors picked from the spread.

In a boy's room, a sturdy masculine-style headboard may be made by lashing bamboo poles together with heavy cord. Use four upright and three horizontal poles. (If you prefer, use leather shoe ties for lashings.)

The wet look, a homes fashion favorite at the moment, may be applied to the headboard. Use the existing board or a solid piece of wood. Pad it with foam rubber and cover it with shiny black, white or vivid-colored vinyl, glueing or studding it securely to the back of the headboard.

The popular Spanish look can be engineered from an old headboard by covering it with fabric and adding a dark wooden frame. A dark red fabric (velvet) with a dark brownish wood might be pretty. A line of decorator nails might be used to fasten the fabric to the wood frame.

Sagging Door

Q.—There is a sagging wooden door on our garage. I read that the way to fix it was to place wedges under it so that it hung properly, then tighten all the hinge screws.

But when I examined it, I found that all the screws were very tightly in place and wouldn't budge even a fraction of an inch. My neighbor suggests placing a brace on the inside of the door, but he isn't quite sure how this should be done. Could you help me?

A.—Place wedges under the door just as you did previously. Attach a wooden brace from the lower inside corner of the door to the upper outside corner. Buy a metal rod and turnbuckle arrangement and attach it from the lower outside sagging corner to slightly past the halfway point of the inside of the door. Turn the adjustment until the sag is eliminated.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THIS RAMBLING three-bedroom, Colonial-looking house has two and a half bathrooms, a full cellar and a two-car garage. The kitchen has counters along three walls, and the living room has a large picture window overlooking the rear grounds. The large Early American room comes with a beamed ceiling with a built-in barbeque grill. There are sliding doors to the terrace. Plan HA614Y, with 2,035 square feet of living space, has a columned portico entrance, and an exterior of wood shingle with occasional areas of brick.

Colors Appear Darker On A Larger Surface

Ever select a paint color for a room in your house — only to discover that it was darker when it was applied to the walls?

This happens often. And the reason is usually the same. Color appears darker on a large surface than on a small one. Thus, when a color is chosen from a small chip sample of the kind carried in most paint stores, it can be expected to seem deeper in tone when it is on the wall.

The lesson always choose a color slightly lighter than you want it to be.

It's wise, too, to examine the chip sample in both natural and artificial light. This is especially important when selecting a color for the outside of the house, as one picked under the lights of a store may appear quite different when the sun is shining on it.

Colors should be chosen on the basis of your personal preferences plus the effects you are attempting to achieve. The worst reason for making a selection is that a color happens to be "in" at the moment. It may be "out" in a year or two.

A problem room will often yield to the proper color treatment. Want a small room to seem larger? Paint the woodwork the same color as the walls. Want a large room to get a more intimate feeling? Use deep colors. Ceiling too low? Paint it a pale tint of the wall color. Ceiling too high? Use a darker color than the walls.

Blues, blue-greens and blue-grays are not recommended for a room with a northern exposure. The extensive use of warm red, oranges and yellows is unwise in a room with a southern exposure. This does not mean that all of these colors should be avoided in such rooms; only that they should not predominate. (For Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," send 25c and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743.)

Color can be especially useful in a kitchen, which lends itself to a variety of colors more than most other rooms. The cool blues, blue-greens and blue-grays can be brightened with accent splashes of gay yellows, pinks and corals. When white is used for the walls, it can be highlighted with touches of both warm and cool accents.

The shape of a box-like kitchen or one that resembles a long galley will take on a more interesting appearance if one wall is enameled in a different color than the others. To widen the look of a long, narrow kitchen, paint the side walls a light color and the narrow end walls a deeper hue.

One use of color that is often overlooked in a kitchen is on the interior of cabinets and drawers. In most cases, such interiors are painted the same color as the exteriors. But they will look a lot more attractive if enameled a contrasting color.

Noisy Pipes

Q.—Every time the water is turned off on the first floor of our house, there is a noise in the basement. One of the pipes is banging against something. How do I find out which pipe it is so I can fasten it?

A.—There's no magic formula to determine where the banging is occurring except by seeking it out. Go down into the basement and have someone turn the faucet on and off until you locate the sound. When you do, you'll be able to notice the actual movement of the pipe, enabling you to refasten or replace the hanger or strap that probably was holding it in the first place.

However, while you seem to have predetermined what the trouble is, don't overlook the possibility that the cause of the banging could be inoperation of an air chamber or shock absorber on the water line.

Accidents Up With Home Power Tools

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Power tools have enabled millions of home owners to tackle projects they wouldn't have even considered years ago.

Unfortunately, the phenomenal rise of power tool users since World War II has brought with it a marked increase in the number and severity of home workshop accidents. Since this is a fact deplored by all, the manufacturers are continually adding safety features to their products. In the final analysis, though, only the user can take the steps necessary to prevent accidents.

Before the electric machine is put into use, a work area free of clutter and well-lit is a necessity. Statistics reveal that many accidents occur because small hazards are overlooked. A do-it-yourselfer using a power tool slips on a spot of oil in his workshop or a wet leaf on his patio. Or he loses control of a tool because there isn't enough light to reveal that the blade is about to run into a piece of metal.

Nearly every power tool comes with an instruction pamphlet or manual telling not only how to use it properly, but how to use it safely. But the instructions get a quick glance or none at all. Even worse, the user deliberately disregards the guard or other gadget designed to reduce the possibility of an accident, simply because he doesn't want to be bothered with it, just as most automobile drivers and passengers neglect to fasten their safety belts.

A good accident-preventing habit is to turn off a power tool when engaging in conversation. Many a nasty injury is suffered when someone using a power tool turns around to answer a question, usually from a member of the household. If you're using an electric machine and someone walks into your workshop, shut it off and do your talking before resuming work.

When a machine is not in use, disconnect it from the electrical outlet. And when you have to make an adjustment or change of accessories—such as putting in a new blade—unplug the cord. You can never be sure you or someone else won't accidentally turn on the tool while you're working on it. As for the cord itself, the same rules apply to the handling of it as those on all electric lamps and appliances. Take it from the outlet by pulling the plug and not the cord itself.

There are a few double-insulated power tools on the market. Aside from those, be sure the machine is grounded. If it comes with a two-pronged plug, ground it according to the manufacturer's instructions. If it comes with a three-pronged plug, use a three-hole receptacle. If an adapter is used to accommodate a two-hole receptacle, the adapter wire should be attached to a known ground, usually the center screw of the receptacle plate.

(You can get either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Wood Finishing in the Home," or "Paint Your House Inside and Out," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Be sure to specify which booklet you want.)

Toothpick Plug

Q.—There was a pinhole leak in the U-trap at the bottom of our kitchen sink. I shoved a round wooden toothpick into the opening as a temporary measure. It worked, but it now is three weeks since I did it. Will it hold permanently?

A.—Probably not, although it might hold for a considerable period of time. Assuming that you don't want to put in a new U-trap, why not leave the toothpick there, breaking it off flush with the surface of the pipe, then applying a seal of plastic steel or one of the other waterproof coverings? The combination of the two is likely to last fairly long, although it must be admitted that the leak might be a forerunner of other leaks in some other part of the trap.

Tile Cement

Q.—I'll be putting down asphalt tile soon. What kind of cement should I use?

A.—Buy the proper cement where you purchase the tiles. For asphalt tiles, the cement has a tar-like consistency. After being spread, it must be allowed to dry to the touch before applying the tiles.

There are many do-it-yourself projects—little shutters inside a window, screens, headboards, wall shelves, and even closets—that a home handyman might do.

Sagging Door

Q.—There is a sagging wooden door on our garage. I read that the way to fix it was to place wedges under it so that it hung properly, then tighten all the hinge screws.

But when I examined it, I found that all the screws were very tightly in place and wouldn't budge even a fraction of an inch. My neighbor suggests placing a brace on the inside of the door, but he isn't quite sure how this should be done. Could you help me?

A.—Place wedges under the door just as you did previously. Attach a wooden brace from the lower inside corner of the door to the upper outside corner. Buy a metal rod and turnbuckle arrangement to slightly past the halfway point of the inside of the door. Turn the adjustment until the sag is eliminated.

An old headboard painted or papered in a lattice weave effect can change the look of a room. An iron garden gate fastened to the wall may provide a charming headboard for a studio bed.

One girl asked dad to fasten grandma's collection of fans to the top section of the headboard for a delightful effect.

Another girl lattice-weaved the wide heavy braid designed by Dorothy Liebes in the size to fit her bed. Dad fastened it to the back of the plain headboard. It could have been decoratively nailed to the front of the headboard leaving the headboard's border visible.

One young man decided on a great swirling abstract design on the wall behind his bed. If you go for such an idea, think "moon and rainbow" and it will be simple, his father suggests. He made a great big orange circle, and put swirls above it of light green, yellow and vivid pink in a rainbow design.

Manufacturers often suggest great ideas to stores for displays that will jazz up merchandise. If you are doing a studio room, visit stores and look at such displays.

For example, a magazine issued by a breadspread maker advised stores on carrying out some headboard ideas with basic materials.

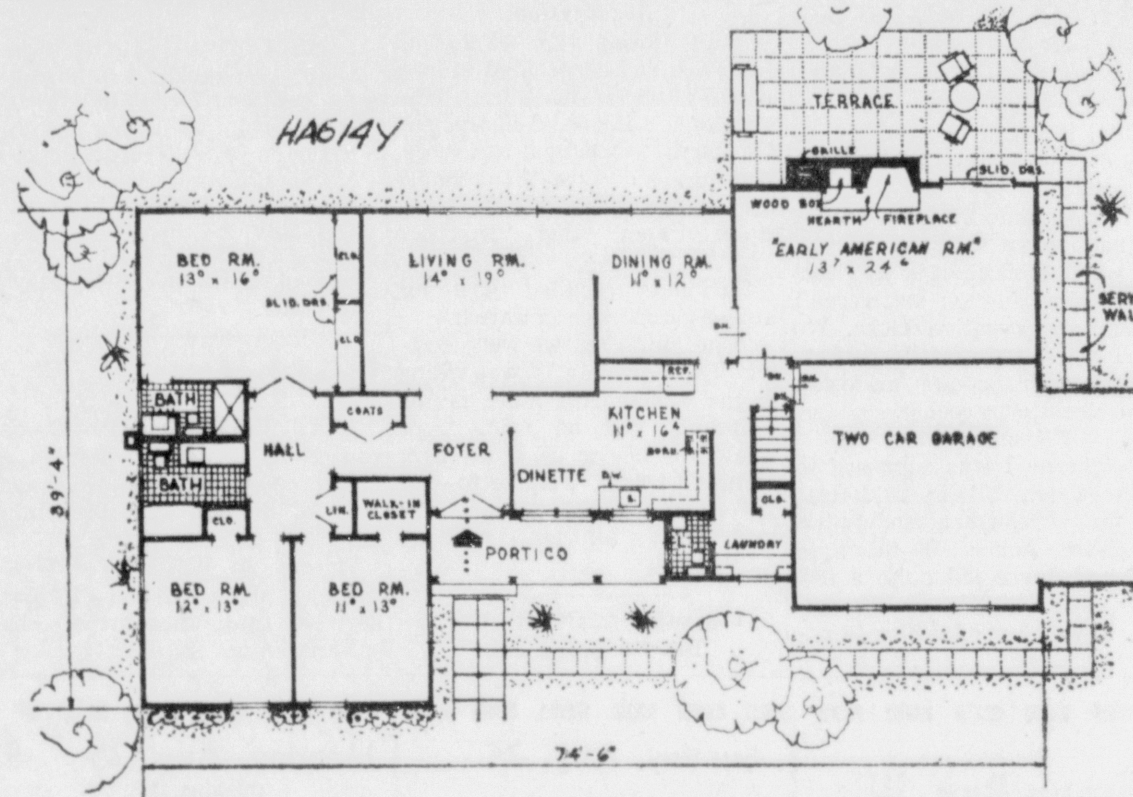

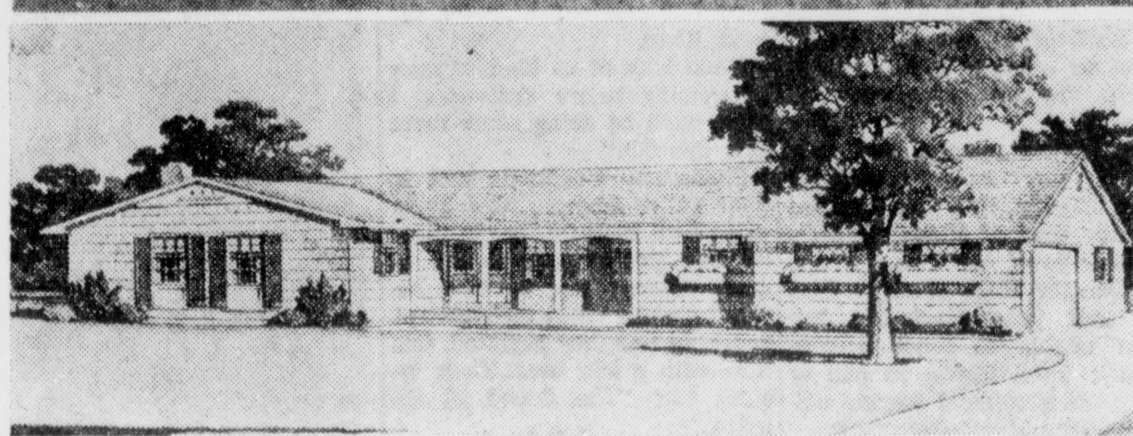

There was a picket fence headboard that may be made by taking five slats of lath about 4 in. and shaping the ends into pickets, and then nailing two pieces of wood across the slats. These may be painted in bright colors picked from the spread.

In a boy's room, a sturdy masculine-style headboard may be made by lashing bamboo poles together with heavy cord. Use four upright and three horizontal poles. (If you prefer, use leather shoe ties for lashings.)

The wet look, a homes fashion favorite at the moment, may be applied to the headboard. Use the existing board or a solid piece of wood. Pad it with foam rubber and cover it with shiny black, white or vivid-colored vinyl, glueing or studding it securely to the back of the headboard.

The popular Spanish look can be engineered from an old headboard by covering it with fabric and adding a dark wooden frame. A dark red fabric (velvet) with a dark brownish wood might be pretty. A line of decorator nails might be used to fasten the fabric to the wood frame.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THIS RAMBLING three-bedroom, Colonial-looking house has two and a half bathrooms, a full cellar and a two-car garage. The kitchen has counters along three walls, and the living room has a large picture window overlooking the rear grounds. The large Early American room comes with a beamed ceiling with a built-in barbecue grill. There are sliding doors to the terrace. Plan HA614Y, with 2,035 square feet of living space, has a columned portico entrance, and an exterior of wood shingle with occasional areas of brick.

Colors Appear Darker On A Larger Surface

Ever select a paint color for a room in your house — only to discover that it was darker when it was applied to the walls?

This happens often. And the reason is usually the same. Color appears darker on a large surface than on a small one. Thus, when a color is chosen from a small chip sample of the kind carried in most paint stores, it can be expected to seem deeper in tone when it is on the wall.

The lesson always choose a color slightly lighter than you want it to be.

It's wise, too, to examine the chip sample in both natural and artificial light. This is especially important when selecting a color for the outside of the house, as one picked under the lights of a store may appear quite different when the sun is shining on it.

Colors should be chosen on the basis of your personal preferences plus the effects you are attempting to achieve. The worst reason for making a selection is that a color happens to be "in" at the moment. It may be "out" in a year or two.

A problem room will often yield to the proper color treatment. Want a small room to seem larger? Paint the woodwork the same color as the walls. Want a large room to get a more intimate feeling? Use deep colors. Ceiling too low? Paint it a pale tint of the wall color. Ceiling too high? Use a darker color than the walls.

Blues, blue-greens and blue-grays are not recommended for a room with a northern exposure. The extensive use of warm red, oranges and yellows is unwise in a room with a southern exposure. This does not mean that all of these colors should be avoided in such rooms; only that they should not predominate. (For Andy Lang's helpful booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," send 25c and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743.)

Color can be especially useful in a kitchen, which lends itself to a variety of colors more than most other rooms. The cool blues, blue-greens and blue-grays can be brightened with accent splashes of gay yellows, pinks and corals. When white is used for the walls, it can be highlighted with touches of both warm and cool accents.

The shape of a box-like kitchen or one that resembles a long galley will take on a more interesting appearance if one wall is enameled in a different color than the others. To widen the look of a long, narrow kitchen, paint the side walls a light color and the narrow end walls a deeper hue.

One use of color that is often overlooked in a kitchen is on the interior of cabinets and drawers. In most cases, such interiors are painted the same color as the exteriors. But they will look a lot more attractive if enameled a contrasting color.

Noisy Pipes

Q.—Every time the water is turned off on the first floor of our house, there is a noise in the basement. One of the pipes is banging against something. How do I find out which pipe it is so I can fasten it?

A.—There's no magic formula to determine where the banging is occurring except by seeking it out. Go down into the basement and have someone turn the faucet on and off until you locate the sound. When you do, you'll be able to notice the actual movement of the pipe, enabling you to refasten or replace the hanger or strap that probably was holding it in the first place.

However, while you seem to have predetermined what the trouble is, don't overlook the possibility that the cause of the banging could be inoperation of an air chamber or shock absorber on the water line.

Accidents Up With Home Power Tools

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Power tools have enabled millions of home owners to tackle projects they wouldn't have even considered years ago.

Unfortunately, the phenomenal rise of power tool users since World War II has brought with it a marked increase in the number and severity of home workshop accidents. Since this is a fact deplored by all, the manufacturers are continually adding safety features to their products. In the final analysis, though, only the user can take the steps necessary to prevent accidents.

Before the electric machine is put into use, a work area free of litter and well-lit is a necessity. Statistics reveal that many accidents occur because small hazards are overlooked. A do-it-yourselfer using a power tool slips on a spot of oil in his workshop or a wet leaf on his patio. Or he loses control of a tool because there isn't enough light to reveal that the blade is about to run into a piece of metal.

Nearly every power tool comes with an instruction pamphlet or manual telling not only how to use it properly, but how to use it safely. But the instructions get a quick glance or none at all. Even worse, the user deliberately disregards the guard or other gadget designed to reduce the possibility of an accident, simply because he doesn't want to be bothered with it, just as most automobile drivers and passengers neglect to fasten their safety belts.

A good accident-preventing habit is to turn off a power tool when engaging in conversation. Many a nasty injury is suffered when someone using a power tool turns around to answer a question, usually from a member of the household. If you're using an electric machine and someone walks into your workshop, shut it off and do your talking before resuming work.

When a machine is not in use, disconnect it from the electrical outlet. And when you have to make an adjustment or change of accessories—such as putting in a new blade—unplug the cord. You can never be sure you or someone else won't accidentally turn on the tool while you're working on it. As for the cord itself, the same rules apply to the handling of it as those on all electric lamps and appliances. Take it from the outlet by pulling the plug and not the cord itself.

There are a few double-insulated power tools on the market. Aside from those, be sure the machine is grounded. If it comes with a two-pronged plug, ground it according to the manufacturer's instructions. If it comes with a three-pronged plug, use a three-hole receptacle. If an adapter is used to accommodate a two-hole receptacle, the adapter wire should be attached to a known ground, usually the center screw of the receptacle plate.

(You can get either of Andy Lang's helpful booklets, "Wood Finishing in the Home," or "Paint Your House Inside and Out," by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N. Y. 11743. Be sure to specify which booklet you want.)

Toothpick Plug

Q.—There was a pinhole leak in the U-trap at the bottom of our kitchen sink. I shoved a round wooden toothpick into the opening as a temporary measure. It worked, but it now is three weeks since I did it. Will it hold permanently?

A.—Probably not, although it might hold for a considerable period of time. Assuming that you don't want to put in a new U-trap, why not leave the toothpick there, breaking it off flush with the surface of the pipe, then applying a seal of plastic steel or one of the other waterproof coverings? The combination of the two is likely to last fairly long, although it must be admitted that the leak might be a forerunner of other leaks in some other part of the trap.

Tile Cement

Q.—I'll be putting down asphalt tile soon. What kind of cement should I use?

A.—Buy the proper cement where you purchase the tiles. For asphalt tiles, the cement has a tar-like consistency. After being spread, it must be allowed to dry to the touch before applying the tiles.

TV Personalities Play 'Tradeout'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A game people play at the top of the TV ladder is called "trade-out."

It goes like this: Johnny Carson, in a Lucy episode, Lucy in a Carson special. Carol O'Connell in a Nabors hour. Jim is the very special guest on a Burnett show.

The device is a simple swap deal, no money is involved, and it can only be played by TV VIPs, usually with a stake in their own shows. Thus, it has become something of a status symbol.

But there are dangers. Too much can bore the audience by over-exposing the superstars, and those extra jobs can wear down a star already toiling long hours on his weekly show. Andy Williams, with a new variety show coming up, recently publicly kicked over the traces and declared that except for real top-drawer talent he was not interested in trading guest-shots.

Economic Sense

The practice makes economic sense, however, since it helps hold down budgets while big stars help build higher Nielsen ratings. Performers, agents have adopted the device and more than one star of his own special during the coming season wangled it by collecting enough promissory notes to round up a really star-studded cast for a salable one-shot.

But even if a performer can't play the game, television's financial rewards are considerable. Many, if not most, variety and dramatic shows hold to a top guest-star price of $7,500.

"When a variety show is forced to pay $10,000 or more, it's got to be a secret deal," said a producer of variety hours. "Agents can only negotiate successfully from strength. The price can range from $1,500 for someone who is eager for prime-time exposure. Most Las Vegas comics get $2,500 to $3,000. A class B performer would rate about $5,000."

The dramatic shows also like to top out at $7,500. Producers are reluctant to talk about pay schedules because every agent would demand tops for his client. It is reliably reported, however, that "The Virginian" has a $5,000 top while "The Name of the Game" sweetens the pot a bit more. Some shows with lower budgets use lesser luminaries for $2,000 to $2,500 per episode.

Most Make Lots

Stars of some movies-for-TV have been paid $25,000. One producer said that if he could persuade Henry Fonda or Glenn Ford to do a TV movie, he would pay $80,000 for a couple of weeks' work.

What do TV's stars make? A lot, but most probably don't even know themselves since they are usually part of tangled deals involving production companies and percentages. Rumored salaries, often planted by press agents, are suspect.

Young, unknown performers picked for new series usually start with modest contracts, in the hundreds rather than thousands per week. A trio of unknowns who teamed in a series last season and found favor return this season with their respective weekly checks more than doubled to $3,500.

'Catch 22' Splits Garfunkle, Simon

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Garfunkle without Simon? It seems as unlikely as Scotch without soda or Abercrombie without Fitch. But it's happening on "Catch 22."

For seven months, Art Garfunkle has been portraying Capt. Natelly, the blue-blooded bomber pilot of Joseph Heller's antiwar novel now being filmed by director Mike Nichols. During that time Garfunkle has been unable to function with partner Paul Simon in one of the most successful singing collaborations of popular music.

What has that done to their relationship?

"It has been hard on Paul," Garfunkle said. "At first we thought it would be good for us to quit for a while, for me to do the acting job while Paul worked on some material for us. We had gotten to the point last fall when the concerts had lost their appeal for us; we weren't getting any creative kicks. We found we were merely rubber-stamping our popular material, so we decided to cool it."

Finish Earlier
"Originally I was supposed to finish 'Catch 22' in mid-May, but the schedule stretched on and on into August. By this time Paul had developed quite a few songs, but I still wasn't available. It was hard for him to adjust, but now we have started recording sessions here for the next album.

"And both of us kind of miss performing before audiences. I think we'll be doing some more of it this fall."

Simon and Garfunkle met in their native Queens, New York, when both were 10, began playing and singing rock as teenagers, enjoyed fair success before breaking up in their college years. In 1963 they reunited, this time with a folk beat. Their instant hit: "The Sound of Silence."

Recollection
Mike Nichols was taken with the song, and he decided to integrate it in his film, "The Graduate." He hired Simon and Garfunkle to work on the score, and they added two more indelible compositions, "Hey, Mrs. Robinson" and "Scarborough Fair."

Garfunkle recalled how his acting career was initiated: "One day when we were scoring 'The Graduate,' I was riding to the studio with Mike in the rent-a-car and he said, 'How would you like to be in my next picture?' I said, 'I'd like to—but I've never acted before,' he said, 'That's all right; we'll do it.'"

Marcey Jo Phillip died Wednesday in a Grand Rapids hospital from the burns she suffered Aug. 12.

ABC To Present Movie Anthology

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The word 'anthology' in television has come to mean heavy, talky, preachy and boring," said Barry Diller, an ABC programming vice president. "The word 'movie' means entertaining."

So the ABC television network has called its new, 90-minute anthology series, "Movie of the Week."

"We are not trying to turn out theatrical films," said the 27-year-old Diller. "Hopefully one or two shows of the series might be a springboard to a future series."

The network, which plans to spend some $16-million on the season's dramas from assorted suppliers, actually is breaking no really new semantic ground. The process began a few seasons back when network executives were worrying about the diminishing supply of theatrical features with which to fill those gaping two-hour time slots. As the movie studio vaults were stripped, costs spiraled. It was not unusual for a network to pay as much as a million dollars for the privilege of broadcasting one made-for-theatres film a couple of times.

Now all three networks are following suit and movies-for-television are in production all over town. If these films had been made for initial theatre release, most would have been regarded as "B features," because of their modest cost—usually $750,000 or under—and the drawing power of their stars.

The mystery remains, why, during recent seasons, anthology series—a different, complete show each week tied together by a continuing star-host—have attracted audiences of unsatisfactory size while shows labeled "movies" got big ratings.

TV Personalities Play 'Tradeout'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A declared that except for real top-drawer talent he was not interested in trading guest-shots.

Economic Sense

It goes like this: Johnny guest-stars in a Lucy episode; Lucy appears in a Carson special. Carol frolics in a Nabors hour; Jim is the very special guest on a Burnett show.

The device is a simple swap deal, no money is involved, and it can only be played by TV VIPs, usually with a stake in their own shows. Thus, it has become something of a status symbol.

But there are dangers. Too much can bore the audience by over-exposing the superstars, and those extra jobs can wear down a star already toiling long hours on his weekly show. Andy Williams, with a new variety show coming up, recently publicly kicked over the traces and hours. "Agents can only negotiate successfully from strength. The price can range from $1,500 for someone who is eager for prime-time exposure. Most Las Vegas comics get $2,500 to $3,000. A class B performer would rate about $5,000."

The dramatic shows also like to top out at $7,500. Producers are reluctant to talk about pay schedules because every agent would demand tops for his client. It is reliably reported, however, that "The Virginian" has a $5,000 top while "The Name of the Game" sweetens the pot a bit more. Some shows with lower budgets use lesser luminaries for $2,000 to $2,500 per episode.

Most Make Lots

Stars of some movies-for-TV have been paid $25,000. One producer said that if he could persuade Henry Fonda or Glenn Ford to do a TV movie, he would pay $60,000 for a couple of weeks' work.

What do TV's stars make? A lot, but most probably don't even know themselves since they are usually part of tangled deals involving production companies and percentages. Rumored salaries, often planted by press agents, are suspect.

Young, unknown performers picked for new series usually start with modest contracts, in the hundreds rather than thousands per week. A trio of unknowns who teamed in a series last season and found favor return this season with their respective weekly checks more than doubled to $3,500.

'Catch 22' Splits Garfunkle, Simon

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Garfunkle without Simon? It seems as unlikely as Scotch without soda or Abercrombie without Fitch. But it's happening on "Catch 22."

For seven months, Art Garfunkle has been portraying Capt. Natelly, the blue-blooded bomber pilot of Joseph Heller's antiwar novel now being filmed by director Mike Nichols. During that time Garfunkle has been unable to function with partner Paul Simon in one of the most successful singing collaborations of popular music.

What has that done to their relationship?

"It has been hard on Paul," Garfunkle said. "At first we thought it would be good for us to quit for a while, for me to do the acting job while Paul worked on some material for us. We had gotten to the point last fall when the concerts had lost their appeal for us; we weren't getting any creative kicks. We found we were merely rubber-stamping our popular material, so we decided to cool it."

Finish Earlier

"Originally I was supposed to finish 'Catch 22' in mid-May, but the schedule stretched on and on into August. By this time Paul had developed quite a few songs, but I still wasn't available. It was hard for him to adjust, but now we have started recording sessions here for the next album.

"And both of us kind of miss performing before audiences. I think we'll be doing some more of it this fall."

Simon and Garfunkle met in their native Queens, New York, when both were 10, began playing and singing rock as teenagers, enjoyed fair success before breaking up in their college years. In 1963 they reunited, this time with a folk beat. Their instant hit: "The Sound of Silence."

Recollection

Mike Nichols was taken with the song, and he decided to integrate it in his film, "The Graduate." He hired Simon and Garfunkle to work on the score, and they added two more indelible compositions, "Hey, Mrs. Robinson" and "Scarboro Fair."

Garfunkle recalled how his acting career was initiated: "One day when we were scoring 'The Graduate,' I was riding to the studio with Mike in the rent-a-car and he said, 'How would you like to be in my next picture?' I said, 'I'd like to—but I've never acted before,' he said, 'That's all right; we'll do it.'"

LONGEST SURVIVOR of a heart transplant, following the death of Dr. Philip Blalberg in Cape Town, South Africa, now is the Rev. Jean-Marie Bouloune, shown adjusting a microphone in Paris. The Rev. Bouloune, 58, received the heart of a 39-year-old man in Paris, May 12, 1968.

Scalded

LAKE ODESSA (AP)—Burns caused by scalding water in a bathtub at her home have claimed the life of a 14-month-old Lake Odessa girl.

Marcey Jo Phillip died Wednesday in a Grand Rapids hospital from the burns she suffered Aug. 12.

ABC To Present Movie Anthology

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The word 'anthology' in television has come to mean heavy, talky, preachy and boring," said Barry Diller, an ABC programming vice president. "The word 'movie' means entertaining."

So the ABC television network has called its new, 90-minute anthology series, "Movie of the Week."

"We are not trying to turn out theatrical films," said the 27-year-old Diller. "Hopefully one or two shows of the series might be a springboard to a future series."

The network, which plans to spend some $16-million on the season's dramas from assorted suppliers, actually is breaking no really new semantic ground. The process began a few seasons back when network executives were worrying about the diminishing supply of theatrical features with which to fill those gaping two-hour time blocks. As the movie studio vaults were stripped, costs spiraled. It was not unusual for a network to pay as much as a million dollars for the privilege of broadcasting one made-for-theatres film a couple of times.

Now all three networks are following suit and movies-for-television are in production all over town. If these films had been made for initial theatre release, most would have been regarded as "B features," because of their modest cost—usually $750,000 or under—and the drawing power of their stars.

The mystery remains, why, during recent seasons, anthology series—a different, complete show each week tied together by a continuing star-host—have attracted audiences of unsatisfactory size while shows labeled "movies" got big ratings.

"The 19th Hole"

By Mike Utt

Now that the three women's club champions have been decided at our local courses, golfers now start aiming for the men's club finals, the wrap up of the league races and the annual tri-club tournament. The men will begin their tournament at all of the local courses on Aug. 30 and will have champions crowned on Sept. 1. Qualifying rounds will be played at the Escanaba Country Club and the Gladstone Golf Club beginning tomorrow.

A couple of eagles were reported at the Highland Golf Club this week. Gerry Stille of Gwinn got the first last Saturday on No. 10 when he sank a 3-iron shot from 140 yards away for an eagle-2. Barney Barnhart got the second this past Tuesday night on No. 1 when his 150-yard 6-iron shot from the bunker on the left of the fairway fell in for an eagle-2. Barnhart's eagle had Con Pratt so upset that he missed his short putt for a birdie on the same hole.

Bill Eis Jr. got an eagle-3 on the first hole at the Escanaba Country Club this week and Chris Barron, the newly crowned women's champ at the Country Club drove the green on No. 2 and two-putted for a birdie during the tournament this week.

Other interesting happenings in the women's tournament at the Country Club were Peg Douglas' birdie-3 on No. 5 when she sank an 8-iron shot from 120 yards away and Gloria Hanley's superb round on Wednesday. Gloria was one over par after seven holes when her match was over. She had birdies on No. 1, 3 and 7.

Jerry Martin and George Young were best ball partners in a match against Dick Nelson and Jim Douglas at the Highland Golf Club Tuesday night and did fairly well as a team. Martin had rounds of 34-39 while Young came through with a 39-34. They had eight birdies in the round, four by Martin and four by Young, none of which were on the same hole.

Buzz Riegel played some real consistent golf at the Highland Golf Club Sunday. He had rounds of 40 and 41 Sunday morning and decided to come back out on Sunday afternoon to try it again and came in with a 39.

Golfers in the men's league at the Gladstone Golf Club will have a steak cookout next Wednesday, Aug. 27. All those interested in eating at the club are asked to bring their own steaks.

Low scorers in the men's league at Gladstone this past Wednesday night were Jim Bratonia, Fran Peterson and Jim Damitz, all coming in with a 40. By the way, last week I said that Pete Peterson would defend his title in the men's club tournament, but this would be an impossible feat since Peterson doesn't hold the men's title at Gladstone — Jim Sundelius does.

Sally Fontaine had an interesting match with Milly Boyce at the Escanaba Country Club in the women's club tournament. Sally chipped in for a birdie on the 18th hole Wednesday and if the shot wouldn't have gone in, the match would have been tied and sent into sudden death.

Rookie Hurler Blanks Orioles

By The Associated Press

The $1,000 kid turned into a $100,000 beauty for the California Angels.

That would be Steve Kealey, a 22-year-old rookie right-hander, who pitched a 2-0 shutout over the powerful Baltimore Orioles in the American League Thursday night in his first major league start.

"I just gave him the ball and told him to go out there and pitch because we had no one in the bullpen," said Lefty Phillips, manager of the Angels.

In the only other AL game scheduled, the Detroit Tigers shamed the Seattle Pilots 7-6 on Mickey Stanley's eighth inning homer.

Kealey, who had pitched only eight previous innings in relief before the game and hadn't thrown a ball in a week because of a sore arm, held the Orioles to seven hits. He fanned two and walked two.

A native of nearby Torrance, Calif., he signed with the Angels for a $1,000 bonus and had to go to a trial camp before making the team.

"I smoked half a pack of cigarettes just sitting around before the game," Kealey said. "I was nervous then, but the butterflies disappeared once I started warming up."

The Orioles, who are making a runaway of the AL East, had Kealey on the ropes in the fourth and fifth, but the rookie wiggled off the hook.

Mark Belanger opened the Baltimore fourth with a double, but Kealey got the next three batters. Baltimore loaded the bases with one out in the fifth on singles by Dave May, Clay Dalrymple and Marcelino Lopez, but Kealey got Don Buford on a pop up and Belanger on a liner to left field.

Eskymos Face Rebuilding Job During 1969 Season

After winning three straight Great Northern Conference championships, picking up a second straight U. P. title, receiving ranking among the state's top ten teams for the second consecutive year, playing 20 straight games without a loss and coming off an 8-0-1 season, it would seem that the Escanaba Eskymos are left with nothing to gain during the 1969 season.

With the loss of 21 seniors, nine of which started on defense and eleven on offense, it would appear that the Eskymos are in for a rough time while trying to rebuild a winner in 1969.

However, the task does not look so impossible after taking a look at the Eskymo roster for the coming season, which they will kick off on Friday, Aug. 30, in a road game with Marinette Catholic Central.

The Eskymos have eleven returning lettermen from last year's squad and all of them received plenty of playing time during the campaign. Mike Dupont, a starter last season on defense, is also a standout fullback and will team with Brian Larson, Doug Howard, Bill Suriano and Mike Makosky to give the Eskymos better backfield quickness.

A real battle is expected for the starting quarterback job between senior letterman Bob Gauthier, senior Ken Peterson and junior Tom Kangas. All three will also handle the punting for the Eskymos this season.

Linemen vying for starting positions include seniors Bob Thompson, Gene Timmer, Lynn Collins, Steve Henslee, Chuck Olson, Mike Rogers, Randy Sanville and Terry Scheene. Seniors and juniors Mike Olson, Steve Rosemurgy, Al Thorbjornsen, Dennis Eastman, Gary Bralley and Dave Schwalbach.

"If the team progresses on schedule and matures early, we could come on strong," says Jerry Cvengros, head football coach at Escanaba. "Although we lack experience, the tradition and winning attitude is still evident in drills."

In addition to the players named already, other squad members include seniors Steve Rolig, Ed Gafner, Bill Flippin, Bob Lehoullier and Steve Vanlerbergh and juniors Steve Cerasoli, Jerry Robitaille, Mike Smith, John McInerney, John Peltier, Tom Flynn, Mike Olson, Scott McDonald, Jerry Swanson, George Wining, Rick Williams, Rick Brookes and Rick Jensen.

Cvengros looks for championship caliber in the conference race from Iron Mountain and Holy Name and vast improvement from Kingsford. He also says that Menominee and West Iron County are rebuilding, but will be strong contenders for championship honors.

"Look for a real chase for honors with any one of five teams capable of winning," says Cvengros.

Cvengros will be starting his eighth year as head coach at Escanaba after serving four years as an assistant to former Eskey mentor Al Sigan. His overall record as a head coach is 47 wins, 10 losses and 3 ties. Under Cvengros the Eskymos have won five conference championships and two U. P. titles. He was chosen as Coach of the Year in the U. P. following the 1968 season by the U. P. Sportswriters Association.

Assisting Cvengros this season will be Jim Hirn, line; Jim Lindstrom, backfield; Frank Miketina, junior varsity; Paul Kangas, junior varsity; Phil Hiney, freshmen; and Ron Goetz, freshmen.

The Eskymos will have five games on the road this fall and four at home. For the first time in the school's history, home games will be played under the lights except for the Holy Name game, which will be played at 2 p. m. The home contests at night will be played at 8 p. m.

The Eskymo schedule: Aug. 30—at Marinette Catholic Central; Sept. 5—Menominee; Sept. 12—at Soo; Sept. 19—at Kingsford; Sept. 26—West Iron County (Parents Day); Oct. 3—at Alpena; Oct. 11—at Marinette; Oct. 18—Iron Mountain (Homecoming); Oct. 25—Holy Name.

Men's Tourney Pairings Made

Starting times and foursomes have been announced for the first round matches of the championship flight of the Escanaba Country Club's men's club tournament Saturday, Aug. 23.

The pairings: 12—H. VanEffen vs. D. Knoll; T. Gregoire vs. K. Turner; 12:07-B. Eis Jr. vs. J. Schultz; D. Miller vs. J. Moore; 12:15—D. Feller vs. B. Eis Sr.; T. Davis vs. T. LeMire; 12:22—J. Magnuson vs. E. Gravelle; D. Andrews vs. D. Peterson.

Skip Zimmermann picked up a pair of victories in the Seagull Series Wednesday and Thursday nights at the Escanaba Yacht Club.

Last night's race was a make-up Sunday Series race. Zimmermann was followed across the line by Richard Straebel for three demerits and Mike Labre with 5.7 demerits.

Dean Shipman placed second on Wednesday for three demerits followed by Richard Straebel, 5.7; Mike Labre, 8 and Pat Gasman, 10. Ten-year-old Jimmy Walsh raced with the fleet and finished sixth. One boat did not finish the race.

Bench Leads Reds Back Atop Tight League Race

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati's one-man Bench has the Reds sitting on top of the tight National League West again.

The Bench, a 21-year-old All-Star catcher with the first name of John, slammed a three-run homer Thursday night that gave the Reds a 4-3 victory over St. Louis and put them in first, one-half game ahead of Los Angeles, which lost 2-1 to Philadelphia.

Atlanta took the Chicago Cubs 3-1, San Francisco nipped the New York Mets 7-6 in 11 innings and San Diego edged Montreal 1-0 in 10 innings in the only other National League action.

Bench, seventh best hitter in the National League at .325, singled and scored on Lee May's double in the fourth. He then gave the Reds a winning 4-0 margin by slamming his 21st homer and boosting his RBI total to 71 in the sixth.

But Bench didn't do it all alone. Al Jackson replaced Wayne Granger, who replaced winner Jim Merritt, 14-5, in the seventh, with runners on first and third and one out in the eighth and the score 4-3.

Jackson got pinch-hitter Vic Davalillo to hit into a double play and then set the Cardinals down in the ninth.

Los Angeles loaded the bases against Jerry Johnson in the eighth but couldn't score and had its five-game winning streak snapped. Dave Watkins gave Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in the second with an RBI single, and Devon Johnson singled in a run in the sixth to break a 1-1 tie. The Dodgers had tied it in the top of the sixth on Maury Wills' run-scoring single.

Atlanta moved to within two games of the top in the West by beating the Cubs behind the four-hit pitching of Jim Britton. The Braves won it in the sixth

Tigers Hand Pilots 7th Straight Defeat

SEATTLE (AP) — Mickey Stanley admires Jim Bouton's knuckle ball as the best in the business, but he admires his fast ball more — especially after hitting one into the left field seats in the eighth inning Wednesday night to provide Detroit with a 7-6 victory over the Seattle Pilots.

Everybody picks on the poor Pilots. The defeat was the seventh straight for Seattle's American League expansion team and the 11th they have lost consecutively before home town fans.

But with the front running Baltimore Orioles and world champion Detroit Tigers finally out of town the disoriented Pilots could hope for respite in a series starting Friday night against Cleveland, the Eastern Division tailenders.

Stanley was the first man to bat against Bouton, the fifth of six pitchers who tried to steer the Pilots out of the doldrums. Bouton throws almost nothing but knuckle balls and Stanley says his knuckler is even better than the one that made Hoyt Wilhelm famous.

"But when the count reached three and two I knew Jim had to come in with the fast ball and I was ready," said Stanley. The game had been a see-saw affair up to then, with Don Wert launching Detroit's ambitions by hitting a solo home run in the second inning. Seattle replied at once with three runs on a walk and four singles.

That was the first time in seven games Seattle had been in front of anybody. Detroit tied once in the third on Ike Brown's single, a walk and two infield outs but the Pilots got that back in the fifth. Steve Hovley doubled and scored on a Tommy Davis single.

Touched off by Bill Freehan's double, a Tiger rampage brought three runs in the sixth. Pinch hitter Norm Cash doubled and ditto Tom Matchick singled — and one-base blows also were contributed by Don Wert and Stanley.

Singles by Freehan and Matchick separated by an infield out and a walk provided another Detroit run in the seventh to make the count 6-4 but the stubborn Pilots wouldn't give up.

Tommy Harper walked and Wayne Comer singled and then the two of them pulled off a double steal that ran Harper's league-leading total to 61 for the season. Both scored when Don Mincher singled and Tom Tresh drew a throwing error trying to cut down Mincher.

That tied the count at 6-6 heading into the eighth. Bouton pounded his fist angrily in his glove as he watched Stanley's homer soar. Then he made an unassisted putout on Tom Tresh on a ground ball toward first, colliding with, and upsetting his former Yankee teammate as he made the tag. He struck out the next two men but the damage had been done.

John Hiller, who pitched the last four innings for Detroit and got credit for his fourth victory, said it was "sorta frustrating."

"They got two runs off me without hitting a ball out of the infield," said John. He thought for a moment and added: "But it was a good win."

The Bengals send Denny McLain, 19-6, against the California Angels' Tom Murphy tonight in Anaheim. If McLain wins, it will mark the second straight year he has been the majors' first 20-game winner.

This is the only O.J. Simpson takes his shirt to the cleaners. Whether or not he cleans out the Baltimore Colts, well, that's another story.

Simpson, Buffalo's glittering rookie running back, will probably get more dirt on his jersey this week than last, when he only played a few minutes, when the Bills take on Baltimore in one of two pro football exhibition games tonight.

He saw limited duty in last week's loss to Detroit, but figures to see more action against the Colts—even though "Mini Max" Anderson will start in his place.

Simpson, used mostly as a decoy in his first pro game, nevertheless learned a valuable lesson: "If you don't hit the hole, you don't get another chance. The backs come up too fast."

Also on tonight's card is a game between Chicago of the National Football League and Houston of the American Football League at the Astrodome.

The NFL Colts, who found the Jets too much to handle in last year's Super Bowl, have taken three straight exhibitions from AFL opponents.

The Bills, who claimed Simpson in the draft after finishing with pro football's worst record (12-14), have won one of three exhibition games this summer. Their victory came over an NFL foe, the Washington Redskins.

Houston, which lost a 33-29 thriller to the Colts last week, will play Chicago for the first time. The Bears are fresh from a convincing victory over Green Bay.

Houston Coach Wally Lemm said backup quarterback Don Trull will start against Chicago. However, Pete Beathard, the No. 1 signal caller, also will see action along with quarterbacks Bob Davis and rookie Bob Napionic, Lemm said.

Beathard has completed 20 of 55 passes for 413 yards and three touchdowns in the two games he's worked. Trull, in one game, completed 5 of 15 for 35 yards and one touchdown.

Although veteran quarterback Jack Concannon has been doing most of the signal calling for Chicago, indications were Virgil Carter would start against the Oilers.

Houston also must contend with Gale Sayers, Chicago's mercury-quick runner.

The games touch off a flurry of weekend activity. Saturday night finds Cleveland, NFL, at San Diego, AFL; Kansas City, AFL, at Los Angeles, NFL; and San Francisco, NFL, at Denver, AFL, in inter-league action. In NL games, it's Green Bay at Dallas; Washington at Atlanta; Minnesota vs. St. Louis at MEMPHIS, Tenn., and Pittsburgh vs. New Orleans at Baton Rouge, La. Miami visits Cincinnati in the only AFL pairing.

"The 19th Hole"

Now that the three women's club champions have been decided at our local courses, golfers now start aiming for the men's club finals, the wrap up of the league races and the annual tri-club tournament. The men will begin their tournament at all of the local courses on Aug. 30 and will have champions crowned on Sept. 1. Qualifying rounds will be played at the Escanaba Country Club and the Gladstone Golf Club beginning tomorrow.

A couple of eagles were reported at the Highland Golf Club this week. Gerry Stille of Gwinn got the first last Saturday on No. 10 when he sank a 3-iron shot from 140 yards away for an eagle-2. Barney Barnhart got the second this past Tuesday night on No. 1 when his 150-yard 6-iron shot from the bunker on the left of the fairway fell in for an eagle-2. Barnhart's eagle had Con Pratt so upset that he missed his short putt for a birdie on the same hole.

Bill Eis Jr. got an eagle-3 on the first hole at the Escanaba Country Club this week and Chris Barron, the newly crowned women's champ at the Country Club drove the green on No. 2 and two-putted for a birdie during the tournament this week.

Other interesting happenings in the women's tournament at the Country Club were Peg Douglas' birdie-3 on No. 5 when she sank an 8-iron shot from 120 yards away and Gloria Hanstey's superb round on Wednesday. Gloria was one over par after seven holes when her match was over. She had birdies on No. 1, 3 and 7.

Jerry Martin and George Young were best ball partners in a match against Dick Nelson and Jim Douglas at the Highland Club Tuesday night and did fairly well as a team. Martin had rounds of 34-39 while Young came through with a 39-34. They had eight birdies in the round, four by Martin and four by Young, none of which were on the same hole.

Buzz Riegel played some real consistent golf at the Highland Golf Club Sunday. He had rounds of 40 and 41 Sunday morning and decided to come back out on Sunday afternoon to try it again and came in with a 39.

Golfers in the men's league at the Gladstone Golf Club will have a steak cookout next Wednesday, Aug. 27. All those interested in eating at the club are asked to bring their own steaks.

Low scorers in the men's league at Gladstone this past Wednesday night were Jim Bratonia, Fran Peterson and Jim Damitz, all coming in with a 40. By the way, last week I said that Pete Peterson would defend his title in the men's club tournament, but this would be an impossible feat since Peterson doesn't hold the men's title at Gladstone — Jim Sundalius does.

Sally Fontaine had an interesting match with Milly Boyce at the Escanaba Country Club in the women's club tournament. Sally chipped in for a birdie on the 18th hole Wednesday and if the shot wouldn't have gone in, the match would have been tied and sent into sudden death.

Marshall, Hens Beat Tidewater

By The Associated Press

Right-hander Mike Marshall hurled a four-hitter Thursday night, beating the Tidewater Tides 2-0, stopping an eight game Toledo Mud Hen losing streak and knocking Tidewater out of first place in the International League.

Tidewater's Jim Bibby allowed the Hens just five hits and struck out 14, but one of the hits was Marty Richardson's homer in the fourth and another was Tim Martin's RBI single in the fifth.

In other action, Louisville bombed Syracuse 14-2, Columbus took two from Buffalo 2-1 and 4-3 and Richmond beat Rochester 8-7.

Racing Results

Skip Zimmermann picked up a pair of victories in the Seagull Series Wednesday and Thursday nights at the Escanaba Yacht Club.

Last night's race was a make-up Sunday Series race. Zimmermann was followed across the line by Richard Straebel for three demerits and Mike Labre with 5.7 demerits.

Dean Shipman placed second on Wednesday for three demerits followed by Richard Straebel, 5.7; Mike Labre, 8 and Pat Gasman, 10. Ten-year-old Jimmy Walsh raced with the fleet and finished sixth. One boat did not finish the race.

But Bench didn't do it all alone. Al Jackson replaced Wayne Granger, who replaced winner Jim Merritt, 14.5, in the seventh, with runners on first and third and one out in the eighth and the score 4-3.

Jackson got pinch-hitter Vic Davallio to hit into a double play and then set the Cardinals down in the ninth.

Los Angeles loaded the bases against Jerry Johnson in the eighth but couldn't score and had its five-game winning streak snapped. Dave Watkins gave Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in the second with an RBI single, and Deron Johnson singled in a run in the sixth to break a 1-1 tie. The Dodgers had tied it in the top of the sixth on Maury Wills' run-scoring single.

Atlanta moved to within two games of the top in the West by beating the Cubs behind the four-hit pitching of Jim Britton. The Braves won it in the sixth

Tigers Hand Pilots 7th Straight Defeat

SEATTLE (AP) — Mickey Stanley admires Jim Bouton's knuckle ball as the best in the business, but he admires his fast ball more — especially after hitting one into the left field seats in the eighth inning Wednesday night to provide Detroit with a 7-6 victory over the Seattle Pilots.

Everybody picks on the poor Pilots. The defeat was the seventh straight for Seattle's American League expansion team and the 11th they have lost consecutively before home town fans.

But with the front running Baltimore Orioles and world champion Detroit Tigers finally out of town the disoriented Pilots could hope for respite in a series starting Friday night against Cleveland, the Eastern Division tailenders.

Stanley was the first man to bat against Bouton, the fifth of six pitchers who tried to steer the Pilots out of the doldrums. Bouton throws almost nothing but knuckle balls and Stanley says his knuckler is even better than the one that made Hoyt Wilhelm famous.

"But when the count reached three and two I knew Jim had to come in with the fast ball and I was ready," said Stanley. The game had been a see-saw affair up to then, with Don Wert launching Detroit's ambitions by hitting a solo home run in the second inning. Seattle replied at once with three runs on a walk and four singles.

That was the first time in seven games Seattle had been in front of anybody. Detroit tied once in the third on Ike Brown's single, a walk and two infield outs but the Pilots got that back in the fifth. Steve Hovley doubled and scored on a Tommy Davis single.

Touched off by Bill Freehan's double, a Tiger rampage brought three runs in the sixth. Pinch hitter Norm Cash doubled and ditto Tom Matchick singled — and one-base blows also were contributed by Don Wert and Stanley.

Singles by Freehan and Matchick separated by an infield out and a walk provided another Detroit run in the seventh to make the count 6-4 but the stubborn Pilots wouldn't give up.

Tommy Harper walked and Wayne Comer singled and then the two of them pulled off a double steal that ran Harper's league-leading total to 61 for the season. Both scored when Don Mincher singled and Tom Tresh drew a throwing error trying to cut down Mincher.

That tied the count at 6-6 heading into the eighth.

Bouton pounded his fist angrily in his glove as he watched Stanley's homer soar. Then he made an unassisted putout on Tom Tresh on a ground ball toward first, colliding with, and upsetting his former Yankee teammate as he made the tag. He struck out the next two men but the damage had been done.

John Hiller, who pitched the last four innings for Detroit and got credit for his fourth victory, said it was "sorta frustrating."

"They got two runs off me without hitting a ball out of the infield," said John. He thought for a moment and added: "But it was a good win."

The Bengals send Denny McLain, 19-6, against the California Angels' Tom Murphy tonight in Anaheim. If McLain wins, it will mark the second straight year he has been the majors' first 20-game winner.

Simpson, Bills To Tackle Colts

By The Associated Press
This is the night O.J. Simpson takes his shirt to the cleaners. Whether or not he cleans out the Baltimore Colts, well, that's another story.

Simpson, Buffalo's glittering rookie running back, will probably get more dirt on his jersey this week than last, when he only played a few minutes, when the Bills take on Baltimore in one of two pro football exhibition games tonight.

He saw limited duty in last week's loss to Detroit, but figures to see more action against the Colts—even though "Mini Max" Anderson will start in his place.

Simpson, used mostly as a decoy in his first pro game, nevertheless learned a valuable lesson: "If you don't hit the hole, you don't get another chance. The backs come up too fast."

Also on tonight's card is a game between Chicago of the National Football League and Houston of the American Football League at the Astrodome.

The NFL Colts, who found the Jets too much to handle in last year's Super Bowl, have taken three straight exhibitions from AFL opponents.

The Bills, who claimed Simpson in the draft after finishing with pro football's worst record (1-12-1), have won one of three exhibition games this summer. Their victory came over an NFL foe, the Washington Redskins.

Houston, which lost a 33-29 thriller to the Colts last week, will play Chicago for the first time. The Bears are fresh from a convincing victory over Green Bay.

Houston Coach Wally Lemm said backup quarterback Don Trull will start against Chicago. However, Pete Beathard, the No. 1 signal caller, also will see action along with quarterbacks Bob Davis and rookie Bob Napone, Lemm said.

Beathard has completed 20 of 55 passes for 413 yards and three touchdowns in the two games he's worked. Trull, in one game, completed 5 of 15 for 35 yards and one touchdown.

Although veteran quarterback Jack Concannon has been doing most of the signal calling for Chicago, indications were Virgil Carter would start against the Oilers.

Houston also must contend with Gale Sayers, Chicago's mercury-quick runner. The games touch off a flurry of weekend action. Saturday night finds Cleveland, NFL, at San Diego, AFL; Kansas City, AFL, at Los Angeles, NFL; and San Francisco, NFL, at Denver, AFL, in inter-league action. In NFL games, it's Green Bay at Dallas; Washington at Atlanta; Minnesota vs. St. Louis at MEM PHIS, Tenn., and Pittsburgh vs. New Orleans at Baton Rouge, La. Miami visits Cincinnati in the only AFL pairing.

Tom Shaw Takes Avco Golf Lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Tom Shaw, a smiling, personable young man, has won once, is fighting his way out of a slump and has quite a way to go to achieve his aims.

"I figure I'm behind Palmer," the soft-spoken 26-year-old quipped Thursday after the first round lead in the $150,000 Avco Golf Classic with a four-under-par 68.

Shaw made the Doral Open this spring his first victory in six years on the tour. Arnold Palmer, golf's all-time leading money winner who is missing this event to rest an ailing hip, has 53 tour victories.

"I've been fighting him all year," joked Shaw, one of the flock of younger players who have moved to the fore this year.

Shaw, a native of Portland, Ore., who plays out of Golf, Ill., has over $48,000 in earnings this season, but has been in a long, long slump. He's missed the cut 11 times since his Florida triumph.

He appeared to be coming out of it last week when he opened with a 69, one of nine who tied for the first round lead in the PGA championship.

"I had a first round 69 and a last round 69 and a lot of garbage in between," he said. "I'm one shot better than that now, and if I can just keep it going..."

High winds, with gusts up to 30 miles per hour, swept most of the top names of the game well back in the field, but the blustery blasts bothered Shaw not at all.

"I can't say it bothered me much," he said. "When you shoot a 68 you can't complain."

Shaw held a one-stroke lead over Monty Kaser, winner of last week's Satellite Indian Ridge Open, and Canadian George Knudson. Tied at 70 were former U.S. Open cham-

A HUGE GAINER

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Quarterback Bob Anderson of Colorado set a total offense record of 2,128 yards in Big Eight Conference football last season. This was almost 500 yards better than the old mark. Anderson gained 1,341 yards by passes and 787 on the ground.

Chris Barron Captures Title

Chris Barron reigns as the new women's champion at the Escanaba Country Club today after defeating defending champion Gloria Hansley 3 and 2 in the championship match yesterday afternoon.

Gloria shot a 45 on the front nine and led 1-up at the halfway mark. Chris then drove the 11th green and 2-putted for a birdie to even the match. The real turning point of the match was the 15th hole, where Chris sank a long downhill putt for a par and Gloria took a bogey-6.

In other matches yesterday, Peg Douglas defeated Sally Fontaine for championship flight semifinalist honors while Rosemary LeMire defeated Rita Sauers in consolation play and Rita turned around to defeat Betty Gauthier for the Beaten Two title.

Milly Boyce won the first flight with a victory over Lou Berglund while Dorothy Anderson defeated Harriet Fitzharris in the semifinal round. Marilyn Christiansen took consolation honors over Marilyn Knoll and Virginia Anzalone defeated Alice Gafner in the Beaten Two bracket.

pion Ken Venturi, Claude Harmon Jr., son of the former Masters champion, and young John Lotz.

All but Lotz were early starters, with the afternoon players taking the brunt of the wind.

Billy Casper had an 81, his poorest round as a professional. Masters champion George Archer had a 76. U.S. Open title-holder Orville Moody had a 75. Pre-tour favorite Gary Player had a 77, matching his highest round of the year.

Lee Trevino withdrew with a back injury after going two under par at the turn.

Shaw got off to a fast start, putting a four-iron six feet from the pin on the par five second hole and canning the putt for an eagle.

He missed the green on the next hole and took his only bogey. He birdied the par five sixth from four feet, ran in a 25-footer on 14th and rammed home a 35 footer in the final hole.

Yacht Club Sets Regatta Schedule

Sailboats from the Escanaba Yacht Club will race to Burnt Bluff and back this weekend in the annual Fall Regatta.

The 44-mile race will be run in two legs, to Burnt Bluff on Saturday and back on Sunday. Regatta chairman Fran Boyce said that the boats will be divided into three divisions, large cruising, small cruising and universal. Boyce also issued an invitation for club power boats to join the sailboats on the cruise to Burnt Bluff.

Boats expected to participate in the race include "Rose of Sharon" owned by Charles Stoll; Dr. Fran Anderson's "Fadaka"; "Moon Shell" owned by John Anthony; "Saber," owned by Dean Shipman; "Betty Joy," Irv DeRoek; "Sea Fari," Harold Meiers; "Keewaydin," Bill Taylor; "Arete" Bill Boyce; "Makai," Gene Kauffman; "Ruth," Bill Moras and the "Kalia" owned by Bill Kamerer.

The official timer will be Emerson Kidd and his boat, "Stranger," will serve as the committee boat.

A skipper's meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 at the Yacht Club and the race will start Saturday morning with the small cruising class at 8 and the large cruisers at 9:30.

All scheduled El Toro races for the weekend have been canceled because of the Regatta.

Grape Boycott Immoral: Beebe

LANSING (AP) — The chairman of a national committee fighting the California grape boycott has formally challenged Cesar Chavez—a boycott leader—to debate the issue on national television.

N. Lorraine Beebe, Michigan's only woman senator, called the boycott "one of the most immoral power pressure tactics ever perpetrated in this country."

Mrs. Beebe, a Dearborn Republican who chairs the National Consumers' Rights Committee, has challenged Chavez to debate before.

But, she said, one of his aides suggested someone other than Chavez take up the challenge.

"The implications, moral, economic and social, of the boycott are such that it is not a matter to be consigned for debate to second echelon personnel who do not carry the primary responsibility for such action," Mrs. Beebe said in her letter to Chavez.

Mrs. Beebe's organization, is billed as a 22,000-member group with representation in every state.

Mrs. Richard Balding (Randy Risa Studio, Marquette)

Lou A. Forsberg And Richard Balding Wed

The marriage of Miss Lou Ann Forsberg and Richard Balding was solemnized Saturday afternoon, Aug. 16 by the Rev. Denmore Kalweit at Messiah Lutheran Church, Marquette.

Mrs. Jerrold Beevar of Gladstone sang, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Clifford Goodman of Gladstone.

Mark Forsberg, brother of the bride, and Steven Malette of Manistique served as acolytes.

The double-ring ceremony united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Forsberg of Marquette and the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Balding of Gladstone.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a peau de soie wedding dress with an overlay of silk organza. Her French illusion veil was attached to a peau de soie petal headpiece and she carried a fireside basket containing mums, cornflowers, carnations and asters.

Miss Karen Beevar of Gladstone, the maid-of-honor, and Miss Cynthia Apelgren of Gladstone and Miss DeAnn Hart of Iron Mountain, the bridegroom's cousin, who were bridesmaids, wore lavender floral printed ivory dresses with lavender mantillas and carried cascades matching the bride's flowers.

James Balding was his brother's best man. Steven Cowen of Gladstone served as groomsmen and ushers were Stephen Forsberg, brother of the bride, and Alden Bjorklund of Gladstone.

The wedding dinner was served in the church parlors followed by open house at the bride's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Balding entertained at the Northwoods Supper Club, Marquette, for the rehearsal dinner.

The bride is a former Gladstone resident, a graduate of L'Anse High School, and is a student at Northern Michigan University. Mr. Balding, a Gladstone High School graduate and a graduate of Northern Michigan University, will teach mathematics and chemistry this fall at Marquette Senior High School.

The newlyweds will be at home on August 24 at 1216 High Street, Marquette.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Forsberg of Ironwood.

Charter Skippers Reporting Coho

LANSING (AP) — Salmon fishermen seeking Coho and Chinook might try Lake Michigan waters off Ludington and Traverse City this weekend.

The Michigan Natural Resources Department says mid-week reports from charter operators suggest continuing promising conditions barring "bad weather."

Charter skippers reported largest schools about four to seven or 10 to 12 miles west of Ludington at depths of 40 to 60 feet. All catches by a 12-foot party in that area were made by trolling with the tadpole as bait.

The department said salmon were found in large groups in the east arm of Grand Traverse Bay.

Seek Bandits

DETROIT (AP) — Police searched today for four bank bandits who held up the Manufacturer's National Bank in suburban Taylor Township and fled with $23,000. Three of the four men who robbed the bank Wednesday wore beards. One of them disarmed a bank guard and ordered him at gunpoint to stand aside.

THE LIGHTING OF THE ESCANABA ATHLETIC FIELD...

With just 2 short weeks away from the first night football game for the Eskymos on their own field, excitement and anxiety is running high. All over town, in the stores, in the offices, on the street, people are buzzing about this very popular project started by the Eskymo Fan Club. As usual no community type project escapes "Ye Ole rumor factory" that grinds away with pessimism. But don't despair, Eskymo fans, because if honesty and hard work persevere the fruits of victory, Then THERE SHALL BE LIGHT come Friday, Sept. 5th for the Escanaba-Menominee football game.

Oh, we've had our share of bad luck and setbacks but always someone is there to bridge the gap. Like Gary Barton of the U. P. Power & Light Co., GE couldn't deliver our transformer on time for the game, but Gary who had already agreed to loan us one said don't let that hold things up, we'll get another out there temporarily. Right now we are waiting for the rest of the electrical material ordered weeks ago, it seems a waste to have guys like Gary Sedenquist, Dick Hellerstedt, Bob Jensen, Maynard Bajanen, coming out each night for no work. However, Claude Bohn of Morley-Murphy has assured us that we will have the rest of the material soon. Then there's other wonderful people like Lloyd Carlson and his son, Riekey who handled the welding and painting, or Jim Anderson who spray painted for two straight days (are you listening Judy). Carl Eastman has been working like a beaver here there and everywhere on this committee. Just like at home eh June? Clarence Londo, Mert Flynn, Delbert Irving, and we can't forget Bill Meiers who moved our Flag Pole over closer to the scoreboard with his own equipment.

Last but not least, our Football Coaches joined the labor gang along with Ken West of the School board and Luther Barrett Superintendent of Schools.

So you see everyone's getting into the act, how about you? If you've just gotten back from vacation and can spare a buck, help us go over the top, we need $2500.00 to reach our goal. No contribution is too small. You can mail them to Box 170, Escanaba or drop your money off at any of Eskey's 3 banks.

Next Week Will Reveal The Writer Of These Articles.

Charter Skippers Reporting Coho

LANSING (AP) — Salmon fishermen seeking Coho and Chinook might try Lake Michigan waters off Ludington and Traverse City this weekend.

The Michigan Natural Resources Department says mid-week reports from charter operators suggest continuing promising conditions barring "bad weather."

Charter skippers reported largest schools about four to seven or 10 to 12 miles west of Ludington at depths of 40 to 60 feet. All catches by a 12-foot party in that area were made by trolling with the tadpole as bait.

The department said salmon were found in large groups in the east arm of Grand Traverse Bay.

Seek Bandits

DETROIT (AP) — Police searched today for four bank bandits who held up the Manufacturer's National Bank in suburban Taylor Township and fled with $23,000. Three of the four men who robbed the bank Wednesday wore beards. One of them disarmed a bank guard and ordered him at gunpoint to stand aside.
